Today

Columbus and His Day,
Japan Knows When,
Gandhi's Kind Heart,
Ice, Water, Steam,

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

COLUMBUS WAS honored yesterday, in memory of that day in 1492 when he sailed the ocean blue, financed by their Catholic Majesties Ferdinand and Isabella.

He wasn't looking for any "America," but expected to find his way to Cipangu, or Japan, and open intercourse with the grand khan of Cathay, to whom he had a letter from the Spanish king. No one wanted to sail on Columbus's ships, at first, not even hardened criminals, to whom pardon was offered.

They believed they would sail a certain distance and then fall "over the edge of the ocean."

The fate of Columbus reminds you that the fate of the great is uncertain.

RECEIVED WITH glory on his return, Columbus "rode at the king's bridle," displayed his parrots, gold, strange weapons and Indians that he had brought to be baptized. He saw both sides of the medal of life.

From one of his trips his two brothers and himself were brought back prisoners and manacled. He kept the irons that he had worn as long as he lived, to remind him "as memorials of the reward for his services."

Columbus, probably born in Genoa, which makes him an Italian, is said to have been of Jewish descent. His ancestors were driven out of Portugal for religious reasons and compelled to adopt Christianity for safety's sake.

Whatever he was or did, he would be surprised to see now the America that he discovered.

COLUMBUS DAY was made interesting by a threat from Chiang Kai-Shek that he would declare war on Japan if the League of Nations didn't do something. The League of Nations will talk, but probably not do anything, whereas Japan will do something, and has done things already.

China's danger is bringing together the North and the South. Both may be united against Japan.

GANDHI, WHO has a kind heart, says he is enduring the round table slowness because:

"I cannot hold a blackjack over England's head now while she is tottering, and gouge India's freedom out of her."

England will not like that word "tottering," not called for yet.

But she should appreciate Gandhi's forbearance. To have serious trouble in India would be painful.

Not all Asiatics are like Gandhi. The Japanese, for instance, believe that the time to go after a thing is when you can get it. Japan is holding a blackjack over China's head, while China is "tottering." Similarly the Irish got their Free State status from the British when the war made refusal difficult.

MARCONI, UNUSUAL dreamer who makes reality of dreams, expects "momentous discoveries," including a solution of the great problem "what is the world made of."

There is, Marconi believes, only one kind of matter, that takes different forms. The dream of the alchemist could have been made reality, if they knew how to go about it.

SOME GREAT philosophers worry because matter, the earth, its mountains, our own bodies are only a collection of atoms, made up of electrons, particles of electricity, nothing real.

Bishop Berkeley, 200 years ago, declared that the world had no existence, accept in men's minds.

But we worry needlessly. Ice is solid, you can skate on it at a certain temperature. When it is warmer and liquid you can swim in it and sail over it. Still warmer, it becomes vapor, in which, you can take a steam bath, and still hotter it will scald you to death.

ALL THIS DOES NOT mean that ice, water or steam is useless, or unreal, or that we need worry about transformations in matter.

The earth is solid enough now, bridges carry loads, cranes lift their burdens, man rules his grain of sand in the universe. Time enough to worry millions of years hence, and by that time, we shall probably be elsewhere in the universe.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, unlike good wine, does not age well. In a jeering mood, addressing Americans, he predicts we shall one day erect a statue to Lenin, and adds:

"Your President, who became famous by feeding devastated Europe in war, cannot feed his own people in time of peace."

Even Mr. Shaw should know that our President is not supposed to feed "his people." They feed themselves and will continue doing so.

Mr. Shaw, rejoicing in what he calls Russia's prosperity, discovers that:

"God is well pleased with Russia, while his wrath is heavy on us."

Russia has done wonders thus far with her plan, by working hard, talking little, unlike Shaw. But her people still live on black bread and bean soup, while revolutionary enthusiasm carries them along.

ALL NATIONS hope, selfishly, that Russia will succeed in her effort to become a great industrial nation. Anarchy among 150,000,000 that would follow failure of the Russian plan, would be sad for all civilization.

TOKIO DEFIES LEAGUE IN WAR CRISIS

Planes Bomb Troops Near Peiping as Geneva Makes Futile Move for Peace

International News Service.

Japan today defied League of Nation peace efforts, notifying the League Council she would not withdraw troops from Manchuria until assured Japanese citizens in that area would be fully protected.

While the Council was meeting Japanese troops continued advancing their positions after Japanese planes had bombed Chinese troops 100 miles from Peiping.

The League Council adjourned after hearing a bitter exchange between Japanese and Chinese spokesmen, during which the latter cited Japan's arrest of American fliers Pangborn and Herndon. No hint of a course of action was given.

GENEVA, Oct. 13.—Japan threw down the gauntlet to the League of Nations this afternoon.

Through her official spokesman, Kenkichi Yoshisawa, she flatly informed the League Council that she will not withdraw from recently occupied zones in Manchuria until the security of her nationals is guaranteed to her satisfaction. At the same time she disclaimed ambitons of territorial aggrandizement in Manchuria.

The council adjourned at 5 o'clock tonight without any indi-

Hurricane Nearing Georgia

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 13.—(INS.)—A tropical disturbance of hurricane proportions, with its center located southeast of Nassau, Bahamas, was reported moving northward toward the Georgia and Carolina coast here today.

No details as to the speed and intensity of the wind were available in the first report made by Meteorologist Richard Gray. Unless it veers, the hurricane will not strike the Florida coast, but pribably will hit Georgia or the Carolinas, Gray said.

Four Go to Prison In Narcotics Case

Pleading guilty to transporting narcotics from Youngstown to New Castle, Louis Goldberg, 25, Max Steinberg, 42, and Eugene Reynoldo, 25, alias Eugene Mascolo, all of Youngstown, were sentenced in Federal Court today to a year and a day in the penitentiary in Atlanta, and the fourth, Ernest Johnson, 35, Negro, of New Castle to six months in the Lawrence county jail.

Hearing of Irene's Pastor Jams Tiny Courtroom

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Oct. 13.—Main street history was being written today in the office of the Mayor here. Conflicting voices from the Methodist Sunday school of Sewellsille were raised to tell how H. O. Teagarden, exminister, came to answer the charge of assault on L. C. Hoffman, assistant superintendent of the Sunday school.

The characters in the little drama are part of the 106 residents of Sewellsville, near here. Teagarden, spiritual adviser of Irene Shrader and Glenn Dague, expelled some years ago from the Methodist ministry, stands accused of choking Hoffman. The little courtroom was jammed.

A row developed. The Rev. Ray Smith, pastor, ordered postponement of the election. Teagarden waived the Methodist rule book in support of the pastor, who ruled that the Sunday School Board instead of the members should conduct the election. Mrs. Emma Boyd testified that Hoffman was attacked when he got up to leave in apparent disgust.

Teagarden knocked Hoffman over the seat, bringing blood.

Threatened

PATSY O'DAY

GUN FOILS O'DAY KIDNAP PLOT

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Oct. 13.—(INS.)—Threats made anonymously over the telephone to Patsy O'Day, film beauty, two weeks ago, started a mysterious campaign of terrorism that climaxed early today when her husband, C. J. Joynt, millionaire contractor, drove off three men in a gun battle back of his Hillside home.

Officers were searching the city for the trio believed to have plotted to kidnap Miss O'Day for ransom. This was the only motive Joynt could advance for the threats.

Shortly after the first threat was made Miss O'Day with a gun drove an intruder from the patio of her residence, and one night last week Joynt and Miss O'Day returned home to find their garage had been broken into and an attempt made to enter the house.

Police were investigating a report that a disappointed suitor had annoyed Miss O'Day. Miss O'Day, one of the belles of the motion picture colony, married Joynt 18 months ago after breaking an engagement to a millionaire Los Angeles cafe owner.

WM. CALLERY ENDS LIFE WITH GUN

Wealthy Shields Clubman Found Dead by Wife; Leaves Farewell Note

With a shotgun wound in his chest, the body of William Callery, 38, wealthy Sewickley Valley clubman, was found in his fashionable suburban home at 513 Maple lane, Shields, early today. The wound was self-inflicted, according to a Coroner's report. A shotgun, its chamber empty and a string attached to the trigger, lay near by.

Callery, a son of J. Dawson Callery, chairman of the board of the Pittsburgh Railways Company, was founder and president of the Pittsburgh Cut Stone Company.

ASKS FORGIVENESS

Relatives said he had been in ill health.

The body was found in the reading room of the Callery home at 4:30 a. m. by Mrs. Callery, the former Irene A. Daly, social registerite of Baltimore, Md.

A farewell note, addressed to "Dearest Pets," begged forgiveness, reading:

"You will have to forgive me again for something you always detested, but which, under the circumstances, I found to be almost the only thing left."

The letter was written on stationery bearing the name of Mrs. Callery, Southern Pines, N. C. It assured Mrs. Callery that she was left in good financial condition. He wrote that he had a $25,000 insurance policy, but "sad to say," his estate was named as the beneficiary.

LETTER UNSIGNED

The letter bore no signature, and closed pathetically:

"My only regret in leaving is the way I always abused your faith and confidence in me. Goodnight, dearest."

Callery was a member of the Pittsburgh Athletic Club, Allegheny Country Club and the Edgeworth Club. He was a graduate of Princeton University.

The death was reported to the Coroner's Office by Dr. J. J. Mitchell and Chief of Police David Gratton, of Edgeworth.

Firemen Find Still In Blazing House

Answering an alarm of fire in a two-story frame house at 2205 Tustin street early today, firemen discovered a still in operation on the second floor of the dwelling. The house was vacant. The fire, police at Center Avenue Station report, was caused by the overheated still. Police seized the still, which was of 75-gallon capacity, 27 barrels of mash and a quantity of moonshine whisky. Police are seeking the operator of the still.

POLITICIANS' FUNDS HERE PROBED

U. S. Investigates Bank and Stock Accounts of City, County Officeholders

Bank accounts and stock operations of city and county politicians and officials are being investigated by federal authorities in a country-wide vice and racket probe, it was learned here today.

Among those whose stock transactions and bank deposits are being investigated is Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh, it was reported.

Evidence revealed by the probe here is expected to be presented to the United States grand jury, which convenes on November 9.

Fifteen federal agents are reported to have been engaged on the local investigation for several weeks. Part of their report has been forwarded to Washington, it is said.

The investigators are reported to have discovered that one officeholder, whose salary is $6,000 a year, traded in stocks to the extent of $400,000 last year and suffered a loss of almost $350,000.

Politicians of all political hues have been called before the federal agents and questioned regarding rackets, and the split-up which officeholders are said to exact from the operators.

The probe, it is said, began about the time the Allegheny County grand jury began an investigation of city affairs and indicted Mayor Charles H. Kline and his deposed director of supplies, Bertram L. Succop.

MANAGER UP TO CANDIDATES

Joseph G. Armstrong, head of the Allegheny County Republican Committee, defeated for renomination for a commissionership nomination, is to give the other Republican candidates an opportunity to pick whatever leader they choose to direct the campaign in the general elections, he said today.

Armstrong declared he will call a meeting of all Republican candidates Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock so that the officers may be determined.

The county leader also thought it would be better if the Republican headquarters were located in a place that had not been used by any political faction. If his suggestion in this instance is followed, the Hotel Henry, Republican campaign center for many years, would be deserted so far as

Aimee Surprises Night Club By Visit

BOSTON, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton and her husband went to a night club last night but not to make merry.

Heading a party of 30, the evangelist created a slight stir on her entry into the club, where she was received with polite reserve. Aimee stayed about an hour and before she left invited those present to attend her evangelistic services.

Erlanger Estate Hearing Postponed

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—(INS.)—The legal dispute over the estate of the late A. L. Erlanger, theatrical magnate, was postponed until a week from today by Surrogate John P. O'Brien at the request of opposing counsel.

Mrs. Charlotte Fixel had been scheduled to appear in her attempt to prove that she was the common-law wife of Erlanger.

EDISON CLINGS TO EBBING LIFE

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Thomas A. Edison continued to cling to the straining thread of life today, but his personal physician reported that while his general condition remained unchanged the aged inventor was experiencing a "gradually progressive somnolence."

The physician said the wizard, whose magic wand of invention helped to change the world's manner of living, had not yet slipped into the coma from which he does not expect him ever to awake, but that it seems only a matter of days until he will do so.

In the last 96 hours, he explained, the only nourishment Edison had been able to take consisted of six teaspoonsful of stewed pears.

Despite his inability to eat, the aged inventor had lost very little weight, Dr. Howe said.

Bandits Isolate Town, Blast Bank, Escape

LIZTON, Ind., Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Two automobile loads of bandits early today isolated this town from communication, wrecked the state bank building with a dozen blasts of nitroglycerine, shot up the town and escaped with more than $2,000 in currency and negotiable securities amounting to more than $1,800.

Boyle Reported Slated For Old Boxing Job

HARRISBURG, Oct. 13.—The resignation of Dr. W. D. McClelland, recently appointed boxing commissioner, it was reported today, has been asked by Gov. Gifford Pinchot. The report further stated that Havey J. Boyle, who was dropped from the commission several months ago, would be reinstated.

The appointment of Dr. McClelland was said to have been sponsored by James F. Malone while the latter was secretary of the State Department of Supplies. Malone resigned his state job rather than support Charles C. McGovern for County Commissioner. McGovern, it was said, was a supporter of Boyle for the boxing commissionership.

TREASURER ASKED FOR $10,000

State Banking Chief Files Claim; Also Hunts for List of 'Mystery' Bonds

Astonishing developments today in the affairs of City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley, whose office is under a double investigation by the City Controller and the District Attorney, are:

1. The State Banking Department, declaring the Franklin Savings and Trust Company had honored a N. S. F. check of Schooley for $9,800, sued for collection of a note which, it was stated, Schooley had given the bank for security of the check.

2—The check and note, it was learned, have mysteriously disappeared from the closed bank. However, state banking officials insist they have official records of both.

3—State banking official demands list, forbids sale of "mystery bonds" allegedly held by Schooley's office as security for $125,000 city deposit in Franklin Bank

4—City Controller James P. Kerr's audit of the City Treasurer's books continues, with important developments expected.

5—Controller Kerr was considering extending the audit to other city departments.

Special Deputy Secretary of Banking George F. Taylor, Jr., today entered the suit against Schooley's hockey club, alleging that a promissory note for $10,000, held as security for the N. S. F. check, fell due on September 4.

Taylor asked for the $10,000, with interest from due date. Taylor alleges that the Franklin bank, which recently closed, honored Schooley's personal check for $9,800, on April 4. The check was payable to the Pitt Hockey Club, he says, and indorsed by Schooley, as president.

HOCKEY CLUB NOTE

On the same day, Taylor's bill sets forth, Schooley gave the bank the hockey club's note for 90 days as security for the check; on July 7, the note was renewed for 60 days, falling due, unrenewed, September 4. Both notes, he says, are indorsed by Herman Friedman.

As in the past several days, Schooley could not be reached today for a statement.

Rumors began to spread in political circles early today to the effect that the note and the check mysteriously disappeared from the records of the bank, yesterday.

It is said that the two records, the only ones missing from a large bundle of similar papers, were probably taken by an unknown employe of the bank during business hours. They were first missed late yesterday afternoon, it was learned.

Immediately following the discovery of the apparent theft, five or six employes who had been carried over after the bank closed were summarily discharged, it was learned. A guard has been sta-

BRUENING THREATENS USE OF ARMY TO CURB DISORDERS

GERMAN CHIEF HECKLED IN REICHSTAG

Defends Dictatorial Decree In Turbulent Session; Asks National 'Unity'

By EDWARD L. DEUSS
International News Service.

BERLIN, Oct. 13.—In a tumultuous session of the reconvened Reichstag, marked by disorderly scenes that necessitated expulsion of a Communist deputy, Chancellor Heinrich Bruening today justified his recent dictatorial economic decree and warned both Fascists and Communists that the army was prepared to suppress any serious trouble.

Bruening spoke for an hour nervously and with agitation. He was constantly heckled and the uproar became so noisy he was forced to make use of a loud-speaker.

PLEADS FOR UNITY

He pleaded for a united Germany though he admitted scant hope that the Nationalist opposition would co-operate with him. He told the Reichstag that Germany now has a "50-50 chance of economic recovery," adding:

"Germany will pull through the winter. Business is fundamentally sound and we have sufficient food."

Turning to the economic crisis Herr Bruening said he intended to continue his policy of international co-operation. He praised the "far-sighted initiative of President Hoover" in proposing the debt and reparations moratorium and declared the German people were "most grateful" even for this temporary relief. He said:

"But uncertainty regarding continuance of this political payment beyond the year fixed by the Hoover holiday paralyzes international trade and the monetary system."

The critical vote on the motion of non-confidence by which the Fascists, Nationalists and other Right groups, with the aid of the Communists, expect to overthrow the Bruening government, is scheduled for Friday.

The Fascist deputies, who walked out of the last Reichstag sessions, but announced their intention to resume their seats, made known today they would be on hand to vote Friday, but boycotted the opening session today, declaring they had no desire to hear Bruening.

ACCEPT BROWN RESIGNATION

The resignation of Norman F. Brown, organizer and director of the County Department of Public Works, was accepted by the County Commissioners today, effective November 1.

Commissioner E. V. Babcock moved the resignation be accepted as of October 15, two weeks before the date suggested by Brown in his letter to Chairman Joseph G. Armstrong.

Armstrong countered:

"I think it should be November 1. The Allegheny River Boulevard dispute is near an agreement that will be eminently satisfactory, and Brown should be here to present the county's side of the debate. It took a great organization to handle the public works program of the last eight years and a capable man to head it."

Babcock withdrew his motion. Commissioner C. C. McGovern made no comment.

tioned to prevent disappearance of other papers.

DUPLICATE COPIES

Taylor, questioned about the missing documents, refused to comment other than to say that duplicate copies of all checks and notes have been compiled by the examiners, as is the custom, and are on file in a safety deposit box standing in his name. The check's and note's disappearance, therefore, does not block possible legal action.

Filing of the suit was first official admission of Schooley having private dealings with the bank. Rumors that he was involved on its books have been rife since the charge that the bank failed to post security, as required by law, for a $125,000 inactive deposit of city funds, made by Schooley.

Schooley, on September 28, denied that the deposits were unsecured. His denial was flatly contradicted by a statement of Taylor's that the bank had no record of bonds having been pledged for the deposit. About personal dealings with the bank, Schooley said:

"I have had no private dealings with the Franklin Savings and Trust Company, nor have I done any business there as president for the hockey club."

Simultaneously with his filing of the suit, Taylor presented at Schooley's office a formal demand in writing that the bonds which Schooley says secure the $125,000 deposit not be sold and that he be given a complete, itemized list of them.

A copy of the letter addressed to City Controller James P. Kerr, at whose instance an independent audit of Schooley's department is being made, stated that the records of the Franklin bank show no trace of the bonds.

Taylor says in the letter that he has been told that bonds of others than the bank have been pledged as security for the deposit and that he is not sure that they were properly pledged and cannot be claimed as general assets for the depositors of the bank.

KERR SHOWN BONDS

Kerr, in undertaking the audit, has said that he was called into Schooley's office about 10 days ago by Special Investigator Arthur Burgoyne, Schooley aide, and shown $125,000 in United States bonds which, Burgoyne told him, were security for the Franklin deposit.

It is these "mystery bonds," not pledged by the bank, yet held by the Treasurer, which have been sought in Kerr's audit and in the special investigation being conducted by the District Attorney's office for some days. Understood to be under seal in the Treasurer's vault in the City-County Building, they have not reappeared since shown to Kerr.

The list of bonds or an admission that they are missing was expected today or tomorrow.

The audit is being conducted by Price, Waterhouse & Co., which conducted Kerr's audit of the Department of Supplies which resulted in the indictment of Mayor Charles H. Kline and Director Bertram L. Succop, of the Department of Supplies.

LOTTERY RUMORS

It was revealed yesterday that rumors that $7,500 was taken from the Treasurer's office to reinforce a tottering "numbers" racket pool some months ago, are being investigated by the auditors. The rumors are thought to have largely persuaded Kerr to start the audit.

The probe takes the place of the annual audit, generally completed in January, which was skipped, Kerr says, because of the food probe last winter.

The examination of the Treasurer's books is expected to take a month to complete. A thorough probe has been ordered by Kerr.

Death of 'Popeye', A Frog, Leads to Court Dispute

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—There seemed to be some question in Small Claims Court whether Emmett F. Ennis' pet frog "Popeye" ate a snail and died in the line of duty or was deliberately killed by a gardener.

S. A. Yamamoto, the gardener who sought $20 back salary, accused Ennis of discharging him without notice and salary. Ennis reported he dismissed Yamamoto because the gardener killed "Popeye" which ate bugs and beetles off the plants in Ennis' garden.

The gardener denied the charge and said that "Popeye's" death resulted from an over-indulgence in snails.

Judge W. R. Kenny expressed his regrets at "Popeye's" demise and ordered Ennis to pay the $20.

CAPONE LINKED IN GAMBLING PROFITS

Ex-Cashier, Once in Hiding, Describes Winnings of $150,000 at Tax Trial

FEDERAL BUILDING, CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—The profits of an alleged Capone-owned gambling house were $150,000 in 1927, a former cashier testified in Al Capone's income tax evasion trial today.

Fred Ries said the gangster was a frequent visitor at the gambling house and always went to the private office. The profits were turned over to Jack Guzik, whom Capone had described as his "financial secretary."

Ries is the witness who was sent on a trip to South America to "hide" before the trial started. He was the principal witness in a similar trial which resulted in a five-year sentence for Jack Guzik.

PLACES CITED PREVIOUSLY

The gambling house of which Ries was cashier was the same one which figured in previous testimony. Several witnesses who once conducted a raid on the house, said Capone met them at the door and announced:

"I own the place."

Ries did not connect Capone directly with the establishment.

On the direct question, "did you ever give Al Capone any money?," the former gambling house cashier replied, "No." Asked if Capone ever gave him any money or any orders about the conduct of the place, Ries again replied, "No."

'GUN-TOTER' HELD

Before the Capone case was resumed this morning, Philip D'Andrea, the bodyguard who carried a pistol into court Saturday, was granted a continuance until Friday, but not admitted to bail. D'Andrea has been ordered to show cause why he should not be cited for contempt of court.

Edward Waters, a former revenue agent, told of interviewing Capone in either 1922 or 1923 regarding income tax matters, but he insisted that "my brain is not an adding machine" and that he could recall nothing of the conversation.

any political activity in the general election is concerned.

The question as to who would manage the campaign arose after Armstrong's defeat in the primaries, shortly after which C. J. McBride, treasurer of the county committee, was indicted on charges growing out of the primary.

Senator W. D. Mansfield today conferred with Commissioner Charles C. McGovern at the latter's invitation to discuss their campaign as Republican nominees for County Commissioners. It was their first meeting since the primary. A report had been circulated that W. H. Coleman was to manage the Republican campaign.

243 OF MAFIA CAGED AT TRIAL

PALERMO, Sicily, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—A gang of 243 men, accused of membership in the Mafia Society, went to trial in Palermo and authorities hoped to remove from circulation the last remnants of that notorious terrorist band.

Most of the prisoners sat in a huge cage in the courtroom, heavily guarded by police and the local militia.

They were charged with virtually every crime associated with racketeering—extortion, murder, blackmail, arson, assault and robbery. More than 300 witnesses had been called and the trial was expected to last more than a month.

Sentences amounting to 1,500 years in prison were imposed on 124 alleged members of the Mafia last June.

War in Far East May End MacDonald Vote Drive

LONDON, Oct. 13.—(INS.)—This evening's newspapers declare that Premier MacDonald is likely to abandon his election campaign at Seaham and return to London at once because of the Manchurian crisis.

British naval forces in the Far East were undergoing a rapid shifting today as the Admiralty prepared to deal with any eventualities which might arise from Chino-Japanese disturbances.

cation whatsoever as to its possible course of action. No definite date was set for the next meeting, but it is believed the council will sit again tomorrow or Thursday.

Yoshisawa's defiance was uttered during the extraordinary session of the League Council called to consider the grave situation, while the threat of President Chiang Kai-Shek, of China, to resort to war if necessary hung over the meeting like a cloud.

DELEGATES CLASH

Dr. Alfred Sze, Chinese delegate to the council, had presented his side of the controversy to the League this morning. The afternoon session had been reserved for the Japanese argument, but it developed into a rapid-fire exchange of views between the two Far Eastern delegates, delivered in an atmosphere of utmost tension.

With the delegates listening to the bitter verbal debate, the opposing spokesmen seemed to be making no progress whatever in bringing an end to the conflict that threatens to precipitate a Far Eastern war.

The meeting developed into an angry debate when Dr. Sze threw a bombshell into the conference by disrupting the regular order of proceedings and reading a telegram from Nanking alleging new Japanese acts of aggression in Manchuria, which took place at the very moment the council was assembling in an effort to mediate the dispute.

Charges were hurled back and forth across the horseshoe table. On behalf of Japan, Yoshisawa charged that China had instituted a concerted campaign of sedition and propaganda against Japan. In reply, Sze charged that Japan's invasion of Manchuria was the result of a carefully prepared military program, launched at a time when the united States and other nations were occupied with other affairs.

ARRESTS CITED

Dr. Sze's original statement before the council was an impassioned plea for league intervention. Failure of the league to solve the crisis before war developed, he said, would "spell the doom of disarmament."

In contrast to Dr. Sze's emotional strain, which was evident also in his frequent outbursts during the afternoon session, Yoshisawa delivered a dispassionate, almost scientific expose of the causes leading to the crisis.

At one point in the across-the-table debate, Dr. Sze set what probably was a League of Nations precedent by dragging in an American aviation exploit in support of his claims that Japan was fully cogninant of the gravity of the situation precipitated by the Manchurian occupation. He said:

"The Japanese well understood the significance of sending 12 bombing planes to reconnoitre over Chinese soil, since only a few weeks ago Japan arrested two American pilots who were engaged on a purely scientific flight."

This was an illusion to the arrest and detention of Hugh Herndon, Jr., and Slyde Pangborn, the American trans-Pacific aviators, who were held for weeks in Tokio and fined $1,025 each for flying over Japanese fortified areas en route from Siberia after failure of their attempted 'round-the-world flight.

Peiping Air Raid Fails To Halt Army Movements

By JOHN GOETTE
International News Service.

PEIPING, Oct. 13.—Japanese military airplanes today swept within 100 miles of Peiping, dropping bombs at Tan-Tsu Shan during the entraining of the South Chinese Seventh Division, according to a communique issued here by Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, Chinese governor of Manchuria.

The bombing attack was the second within a week on the troops of Chang Hsueh-Liang, and apparently was in accordance with the announcement of the Japanese Army commander at Mukden that drastic measures would be taken to prevent Chang from re-establishing a Manchurian government hostile to Japan.

Despite activity of the Japanese air squadrons, it was stated three of the troop trains at Tan-Tso-Shan had departed and that a fourth was to leave before nightfall.

100,000 Russian Troops On Manchurian Frontier

BERLIN, Oct. 13.—(INS.)—A Soviet army of 100,000 men is massed along the Manchurian frontier, well-equipped for winter warfare, and ready to strike at any moment.

Nevertheless, and in contrast to the belief held in some quarters, well-informed diplomats in the German capital feel certain Russia will not strike at Japan if the latter becomes involved in war with China over Manchuria. This, too, is the opinion cautiously expressed by Communists here who are in contact with Moscow.

In some quarters there is even suspicion of a possible Russo-Japanese accord in view of the respect paid Russia's "sphere of influence" in Northern Manchuria by the Japanese military authorities in their recent occupation of Manchurian territory, although the Soviet ostensibly is supporting the Chinese.

Grandchildren Enter Fight For Recluse's Seized Riches

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Grandchildren of Mrs. Ida E. Wood will apply to a court today for a restraining action against Otis F. Wood, a nephew of the 93-year-old recluse from whom, in the past week, processes of law have wrested for safekeeping more than $900,000 in cash, securities and jewels.

Mrs. Blanche Wood Shields and her husband, William Shields, of Red Bank, N. J., are the litigants who have stepped into the case to bring charges of "improper guardianship." Mrs. Wood, the widow of Benjamin Wood, brother of a former mayor of New York City, has been declared legally incompetent.

The grandchildren said they would contend that physical force was used on Mrs. Wood to take her money and that they were forcibly turned out of her hotel room when they called to see her.

When Mrs. Wood yielded $400,000 in cash last Tuesday, she was moved from rooms in which she had sequestered herself for years. She was placed in a chair, wrapped in a blanket and carried downstairs, Mrs. Shields said she had been informed.

At that time, Mrs. Wood still had $500,000 concealed on her person.

CASH AND GEMS TAKEN FROM PATRONS

Proprietor Slugged as Shot Goes Wild; Thugs Escape In Auto With Plunder

Invading a coffee shop in Maple avenue, Clairton, early today, six armed men lined up a score of patrons, fired one shot at the proprietor and robbed patrons of more than $1,500 in cash and several diamond rings.

The shot was fired at the proprietor, Charles Reza, after he had reached for a pistol in the hands of the leader. The robber struck Reza on the head with the revolver and then fired a shot into the ceiling.

THREATENED WITH GUN

Leaving their machine in front of the coffee shop in the Blair section of Clairton, the six gunmen entered the establishment. They knocked at the front door and Reza answered their summons. As the door was opened, the leader placed a gun against Reza and commanded him to admit them.

Believing that a joke was being played on him by friends, Reza grabbed at the gun and was knocked on the head. After the shot was fired the players leaped to their feet and the robbers entered, lining the men up against the wall.

ESCAPE IN AUTO

The gangsters went about their work in a businesslike manner, scooping up the money from the several tables, where card games were in progress and from the clothing of the players. Two men reported losing jewelry but another said he had saved a valuable ring by placing it in his mouth.

Clairton police were summoned to the establishment immediately after the men fled in their automobile. A description of the six was immediately flashed to state police at Greensburg and to police at Pittsburgh and McKeesport.

OUSTED AUTHOR TO SUE CLERIC CRITIC

Professor Who Lost Job For Writing 'Cane Juice' Resents 'Buzzard' Epithet

Universal Service.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 13.—Dr. John Earle Uhler, center of the educational, religious and political storm that has swept the state since the publication of his novel, "Cane Juice," prepared today to sue his chief critic, the Rt. Rev. Monsignor F. L. Gassier, who bitterly denounced the book and called its author a literary "buzzard."

Uhler announced that he had employed counsel and accepted the proffered assistance of the Civil Liberties Union, of New York, in seeking redress from Monsignor Gassier, whose attacks are blamed for his expulsion Saturday as English professor at the Louisiana State University.

Meantime, students at the State University at Baton Rouge were rallying to the professor's defense. A petition demanding his reinstatement was circulated, and co-eds protested they did not regard the novel as a reflection on them.

"Cane Juice," Dr. Uhler's novel, presents a vivid picture of student life at the university and the sugar plantation country. The hero, a young "Cajun," is an idealist, but he possesses the virtues and vices of the average college student, and, besides, a seemingly irresistible attraction for women, which involves him in frequent difficulties.

It is these episodes mainly that are the target of Monsignor Gassier's wrath. One deals with an affair between the hero and a co-ed in a Pullman berth; another a party where a co-ed disrobed and danced on a table, still another with a piece of high-powered petting at a house party.

CONDEMNED DOG TO GET CHANCE FOR LIFE

'Roxie,' Doomed to Die As Vicious, Gets Stay, Pending Court Appeal

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Roxie is to have another chance for life after all.

The case of Roxie, a big German shepherd dog, condemned to death by Justice Paul W. Shafer after a lengthy trial here on charges of viciousness, today was to be appealed to the Calhoun County Circuit Court. Offers have come from all over the country to assist in financing the appeal.

A dozen neighbors testified on both sides of the case when the trial was held in Justice Court. Some charged Roxie with viciousness, others said the dog was unintentionally rough and playful.

Wayne Rosenbaum, Roxie's owner, says he wants a jury to decide the case when the trial goes to Circuit Court. The state will summon more than 20 witnesses.

Justice Shafer continues to receive batches of letters from all parts of the country pleading for Roxie's life.

COW TEST WAR GROWS IN IOWA

NEW LONDON, Ia., Oct. 13.—(INS.)—More stringent measures in dealing with Iowa's rebellious farmers loomed today as a consequence of the storming of the local jail by 500 embattled cattle owners.

Smashing doors and twisting bars, the mob overran the prison and released Ronald Hart, 20, from his cell. The youth had been arrested for interfering with state veterinarians testing cattle in observance of the disputed bovine tuberculin test law. He was one of a crowd of farmers who stood about and jeered at the veterinarians and the militia men protecting them.

Engagement to Actress Denied by McCormick

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 13.—(Universal.)—Are wedding bells soon to peal for Harold F. McCormick, multi-millionaire manufacturer of Chicago, and Betty Noble, Culver City actress and singer?

Rumors tended to affirm the question.

In Chicago, however, McCormick, who divorced the grand opera diva, Ganna Walska, three days ago in a 15-minute courtroom procedure, denied he is to wed Miss Noble. He said:

"We are not going to be married. We are friends and nothing more."

At her Culver City home, where she lives with her mother, Mrs. B. Elizabeth Noble, the actress-singer was reported out of town. Mrs. Noble said her daughter was away on a boat. A friend said she had gone to New York several days ago.

The mother was reticent today in discussing the reported engagement of her daughter to the millionaire, who is chairman of the board of the International Harvester Company. She said:

"It won't be my wedding. It'll be their wedding, and they'll have to be the ones to tell anything about it."

McCormick is said by friends to have met Miss Noble in Laguna Beach, Cal., where he is the owner of a newspaper, two years ago. Miss Noble was there appearing in a show, it was said.

West, of Morgantown High School, who was given a leave of absence at the beginning of the fall term, has been indicted by the October grand jury of Monongalia County on two statutory charges. Two janitors of the high school appeared before the grand jury as witnesses, Prosecutor Albert Shuman said.

Sculptress Whose Nude Startled Capital Dies

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Mrs. Alice Pike Barney, 70, playwright and patron of the theater, who at one time was a colorful figure of social life in Washington, fell dead of heart disease at a concert here last night.

The daughter of a Cincinnati distiller, she was 17 when she was married to Albert Clifford Barney, who died in 1914 leaving her $5,000,000. When she was 60 she was married to Christian Hemmick, 26, artist, who obtained a divorce.

Mrs. Barney and her daughter, Natalie, startled Washington on several occasions. The mother executed a nude, reclining statue of the daughter and it appeared one day on the lawn of the Barney home. Police insisted that it be covered with a tarpaulin until it could be removed.

BARR DECLARES FOR M'GOVERN, MANSFIELD

Independent in Formal Commissionership Plea Pledges Immediate Audit

C. M. Barr, making formal announcement today of his candidacy for County Commissioner on the Independent ticket, urged election of the two Republican nominees, William D. Mansfield and Charles C. McGovern.

McGovern is Barr's running mate on the Independent ticket, but as the former's election on the Republican ticket is regarded as a foregone conclusion, Barr is seeking the minority seat.

Barr's platform calls for a cleanup of the County Bureau of Elections, wiping out of "vicious practices" of political machines, a new Board for Assessment and Revision of Taxes, a complete audit of the county's affairs and economical administration.

PLEDGES AUDIT

His statement:

Government was instituted among men for the benefit of the governed.

No man has a right to be in public office unless he is there for public service.

Record of actual performance is a safer guide than mere promises when the voters of Allegheny County decide who should be elected November 3, 1931.

The issues of this campaign between bossism and the rights of the people are clearly defined whether boss rule is represented by a candidate himself or by others who seek to perpetuate and extend their power through a candidate, even though he be of another party.

I am convinced that the great majority of the tax-paying, voting citizens have made up their minds that now is the time for a real cleanup in Allegheny County politics.

FOR NEW TAX BOARD

I am seeking office as a commissioner of Allegheny County on this platform, pledging myself to:

1. A thorough and complete and immediate audit of Allegheny County affairs. Follow that audit through to a conclusion and then act upon those findings.

2. A new, intelligent, honest and dependable board for the assessment and revision of taxes with the least possible cost to the taxpayers and an equitable assessment for each property owner.

3. A thorough cleanup in the bureau of elections that will insure a square deal before election and an honest count afterwards.

4. A careful and complete survey of the county's finances looking toward holding taxation within the bounds of absolute necessity.

5. The greatest possible economy and efficiency in spending the taxpayers' money so much needed in this time of depression in business and industry.

6. The complete elimination of vicious practices upon which political machines have been built and maintained at such tremendous cost and grief to the people least able to bear the burden.

7. Conduct the county government as I would conduct my private business. The people are its stockholders. The County Commissioners are their officers and board of directors and must expect to make an accounting to them.

I will stand on this platform and promise to use every ounce of intelligence and energy at my command for its consummation.

I stand pledged, if elected minority member of the board of county commissioners to cooperate with the policies of Senator William D. Mansfield and Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, both of whom I admire and respect.

I believe that the service of these men as majority members of the commission can be made infinitely more valuable if the people of this county will give them as a minority commissioner a man who is pledged to the things they stand for and pledged to the causes they represent. I served with Senator Mansfield in the Senate of the State of Pennsylvania. Together we fought for a new and better school system for the children of this state. As chairman, I directed the campaign which made Mr. McGovern Republican nominee for county commissioner. That was the third campaign I have directed for him. Together we have fought for what we believe to be right.

I urge the election of them both. And I submit that with myself in the minority place on the board of County Commissioners, with these two men, that the men and women of this county are assured of an administration which will be unswerving in its devotion to the interests of the people of this great community.

If elected I will endeavor to carry on during my term of office, trying each day to redeem my promises and at the end of my term leave my record as the best possible account of my stewardship.

Mary Garden Plans Test of 'Greatness'

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Mary Garden was in town for a screen test today and she was looking to it to settle the question "Is Mary Garden a great actress?"

She said people think she is, but they don't know and she doesn't know—and only time and the screen test will tell.

Busy Stork Brings Mt. Lebanon Man Double Title

William Reed, of Mt. Lebanon, yesterday became a grandfather and great-grandfather within 10 minutes, the great-grandson arriving first.

A son was born to Mrs. Arden Young, of Brentwood, granddaughter of Reed, and within a few minutes the stork left a son in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Creps, 265 Magnolia avenue, Mt. Lebanon. Mrs. Creps is a daughter of Reed.

LABOR DIVIDED ON BEER PLAN

VANCOUVER, B. C., Oct. 13.—INS.—After a three-day vacation from convention sessions, the American Federation of Labor was to swing into action today in an effort to have its business cleared up by Thursday.

Discussed by the delegates perhaps more than any other question, the matter of obtaining beer for the American workingman was again to the fore today.

Just what program the federation will adopt to secure beer, and what alcoholic content it will recommend, is a matter for conjecture. The committee to which the question was referred appears to believe 2.75 per cent is sufficiently potent. Other delegates consider that even "good old beer" will not fill the bill; they would make a clean sweep of prohibition laws and return to the beverages of yesteryear.

Observers were inclined to believe that the convention would ultimately go on record against unemployment insurance. John Joseph Leary, "special representative" of the United States Labor Department, yesterday voiced opposition to the proposal.

ESTATE OF CAT BRINGS $8,000

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—The spectacle of a public sale of the household effects of a deceased cat—the world's wealthiest—drew a tightly packed crowd yesterday to the erstwhile premises of the late Mitzi, blue Angora legatee of Dr. Maud Cain, who died last October, leaving the feline a pretentious home, $10,000 in furnishings and a fund of $15,000.

The auction in suburban San Gabriel was to clear up the estate of the 18-year-old cat, which died last April. The crowd was larger than many which have attended auctions at homes of motion picture personages.

Auctioneer C. H. O'Connor said more than $8,000 was realized from the sale.

Dr. Cain left the cat and its estate under care of Mrs. Pauline Goetz, the physician's companion. Most of Dr. Cain's $265,000 estate went to charity. The cat's estate goes to Mrs. Otelia Kuschke, of Los Angeles, special administratrix for Dr. Cain.

Policeman Divorced On Cruelty Charge

Her husband, a coal company policeman, beat and kicked her and threatened her life, Mrs. Margaret C. Resseger, of Brookline boulevard, Brookline, told Judge Joseph M. Swearingen in Common Pleas Court. She was granted a divorce from Floyd G. Resseger, of Washington, Pa., on grounds of cruelty. They were married in June, 1916, when she was 17 and he was 18, and they were school friends in West Virginia. She said he left her in 1929, when they lived in Washington.

SUIT ATTACKS VOTE MACHINE CONTRACT

Woman Asks Court to Bar Poole Equipment Until Beamish Re-examination

A taxpayer's suit filed today asked that the courts restrain the County Commissioners from accepting any more of the 1,100 vote machines from the Poole Engineering Company, and to restrain county officials from paying the concern further until after the machines' re-examination by Richard J. Beamish, secretary of state.

The suit, naming Ada B. Bassett, of Northumberland street, a member of the League of Women Voters, as a plaintiff, was filed by Attorney Charles F. C. Arensberg.

LISTS DEFENDANTS

The bill of complaint specifies Commissioners Armstrong, Babcock and McGovern; and County Controller Robert G. Woodside, Treasurer John Francies and the Poole Engineering and Machine Company as defendants.

More than 600 of the machines have already been delivered, it was understood. The necessary deposit to provide re-examination of the machines was sent Secretary Beamish last week.

The suit reviews the history of the contract between the county and Poole Company, and alleges that the company did not fulfill the contract as specified; that it was granted an extension of time and, according to the terms, was not to get full payment until the completion.

The court is asked to grant an injunction preventing the county and Poole employes from touching or handling the machines up to October 15, and until an examination is made by Secretary Beamish's examiners.

PAYMENTS ATTACKED

It asks that all defendants, except the Poole company, be restrained from "making any further payments of money to the Poole company; from receiving any further machines of the company."

It asks that "in the event as a result of the examination Secretary Beamish revokes the approval of the American voting machine," that the county be restrained from purchasing or receiving any more Poole machines.

It also asks that the Commissioners be required to take "appropriate action against the Poole company to enforce all rights of the county under the provisions of the indemnity bond.

In the contract between the Poole company and the county, appended to the suit, a proviso explains that the company set up a $200,000 bond for faithful performance of the agreement.

The plaintiff, Ada Bassett, is described as a citizen and taxpayer. While she is a member of the League of Women Voters, it was explained the league had no part in the suit.

END ARGUMENT IN WINE CASE

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Trial of the Ukiah Grape Products Company of New York on a charge of violating the federal dry laws has closed with attorneys' arguments centered about the meaning of the word "manufacture."

Judge Merrill E. Otis, of the Federal District Court, took the case under advisement last night and announced he would attempt to reach a decision by Friday. A jury had been waived under agreement of counsel.

The company and A. E. Brunett, its Kansas City manager, were accused of having violated the Volstead act by the sale of its product.

Attorneys, regarding the trial as a test case involving the fate of the grape concentrate industry, clashed over the term to designate the following of instructions for care of the five-gallon and 10-gallon kegs.

Benedict Leerburger, of the defense, asserted that "according to every shade of meaning offered by the dictionaries, the purchasers of this product manufacture nothing.

Joseph Koval, 10, of 207 Eighteenth avenue, Homestead, was recovering at his home today from a head injury received when he was struck with a brick while playing with a group of children in West Field, Homestead, yesterday, according to police. He was treated at Homestead Hospital following the accident.

College Bandsmen Play 'Blues' Over Economy Cuts

LAWRENCE, Kan., Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Saxophones of college orchestras are playing super "blue" notes at the University of Kansas.

Social costs, say university authorities, must be cut down. But orchestra leaders drop their batons in alarm and shout of "unemployment."

Agnes Husband, dean of women, and Henry Werner, dean of men, favor fewer parties and cheaper prices for orchestras. Sororities have voted to hold only two parties each this year. Fraternities have been asked to do the same.

Orchestra leaders say approximately 75 men depend on the profits from tooting or drumming or fiddling to pay their way through college.

ROBBERS WRECK STOLEN CAR

East End police are investigating the report of a robbery in the Benkar Garage, 6300 Penn avenue, early today. Byron Smith, Negro, night manager, reported that two men entered the garage and while one forced him into an office, the other moved several cars and selected the automobile of Thomas J. Blair, 6537 Fifth avenue, which had been in storage. Driving to the door, Smith said, the robbers alighted and returned to the office where they took $25 from a cash register and fled.

A square away the automobile was wrecked when it crashed into a building at Penn avenue and Blanck way. The men abandoned the car and fled, Smith told police.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 13.—(INS.)—Pennies of schoolboys who worship at the shrine of aviation will pay for the damage done to the plane Al Williams, former Navy air ace, cracked up here Sunday while performing at the Southern Air Pageant.

A purse totaling $259.99 had been raised today by youngsters to pay for repairs to the undercarriage of Williams' $5,000 plane which the flier bought with savings from 14 years' Navy pay.

Williams crashed into a bank here yesterday when his motor failed to catch up as he came out of an inverted "falling leaf." The flier was only slightly bruised.

ALL IN A DAY By Mark Hellinger

ON A RECENT NIGHT, reports Lew Brown, several girls sat around in a Broadway dressing room. There wasn't a male, including Mr. Brown, within 40 miles. And the ladies of the ensemble were wasting their time in a discussion of life and love. It was one of the few occasions that a group of chorines ever grew serious at one and the same time.

"To be married and have a nice baby boy," mused one. "That's my idea of happiness. Think of meeting the man you love at the door every evening and walking quietly to the crib in which the baby is sleeping. Nothing to do except to care for your man and your kid. What more could anyone ask?"

A second girl waved a deprecating hand.

"You've got the wrong slant," she announced. "All that stuff is bunk. I know because I've tried it. That's the kind of junk you read in books.

"If anybody asked me, which nobody has, I'd tell 'em that I want a swell home without any guy you love to meet at the door either. That's the baloney.

"Just you gimme an old goof who has about 60 years behind him. Let him hand me a Rolls-Royce and an apartment on Park avenue. Let him send me plenty of jewels from Cartier's and a basket of fruit each morning from Hicks.

"That's the kind of a life I'd like. All this love stuff is strictly for the mugs."

And so they went on. A third girl spoke her little piece. And a fourth one agreed with the second. Then Agnes spoke. Agnes was a quiet little kid with a far-away look. She seldom stepped into a conversation. But when she did the others listened.

"You know, girls," she murmured, "I love to listen to all of you talk. Your ideas are all so different, your thoughts are all so varied. I get a kick out of the difference of opinion."

She paused for a moment. Then—

"I listen to Betty when she says she wants a baby boy and a sweet man, and I love her for it. Then I hear Barbara yearn for an old boy with a heavy pocketbook—and I like her for her frankness. Then Virginia talks. Then Meredith. Each one has something to say—except me. My ideas are totally different."

The first girl regarded her seriously.

"What do you mean, Agnes?" she inquired. "What do you mean—you're different?"

Agnes shrugged her shoulders.

"It's not easy to explain," she replied, "but I am. If you'll be patient with me, I'll try my best to tell you what I mean. Listen.

"No matter what you kids talk about, there's always a man in the case. All of your philosophies are built around the opposite sex. One wants an old one and one wants a young one. But it must be a man. No matter what you say, that's your idea of happiness.

"Well, I want a man too, but that man is my father. Yes, my father. I want to see him sitting down again with my mother on the porch of our old farm in the mountains. I want to see them [illegible] after [illegible] days, and talking to me as we all gaze at the fields and watch the moonbeams dancing on the sweet-scented flowers.

"I want the flowers, the bees, the trees, the streams. I want to listen to my daddy as he smokes his pipe and talks about the weather. I want to see my mother pat his head, tell him it's 9 o'clock and [illegible] him to go to bed."

The girl was evidently living amidst her memories. The other damsels never moved.

"Yes," she went on, "you girls can't understand what that would mean. Here I am on Broadway, a thousand miles from the old farm. Many men attempt to romance with me. But none of them has the slightest idea what romance means.

"When you watch a country dance in the moonlight, that's romance. When you sit beside a rippling brook and gaze at a cloudless sky of blue, that's romance. When you dig into a home-cooked meal that your mother has prepared and you watch your daddy caress her for all her trouble, that's romance too.

"Maybe you have a slight idea of what I mean now, girls. And maybe not. But I just wanted to get off my chest the things I wanted to say. You all had your chirp. That was mine.

"You see how different our ideas are? You want some kind of a man to make your home. One wants this. Another wants that. Not me.

"Just give me my daddy and my mother. Give me the old farm and I give the rest of the world to you."

Agnes sat back in her chair. The other chorines seemed awed by her declaration. Finally the second one leaned forward.

"That's swell, Agnes," she cried almost reverently. "You talk beautiful. But tell us something. If you love it so much, why don't you quit Broadway and go back to your mother, your daddy and the farm?"

Agnes heaved a long sigh.

"There's a little hitch," she muttered. "Father's in jail, mother ran off with another guy—and we never had a farm like that in the first place!" . . .

WHEN YOU speak of the better Broadway comics, you must not forget to include the name of Jack Osterman. Jackie has one of the fastest brains on the big alley, and there is no one who can top him in repartee. Osterman has been treating life as just a bowl of cherries for so long, however, that the managers have grown a little leary of him. It's nobody's fault but his own.

The other afternoon Sam Shipman, the playwright, was lunching in a Broadway rendezvous. He has known Jackie ever since the comedian was a small kid, but when he wanted to introduce him to somebody at the table, he forgot the name. He snapped his fingers apologetically.

"I'm terribly sorry," cried Shipman, "but I don't seem to remember your name. And I know you so well, too."

Jackie offered his name. The playwright shrugged his shoulders.

"That shows you," he murmured. "I know your name as well as I know my own. But I have too many things on my mind these days. I'm producing my new play, you know. And little details escape me."

The comedian sighed.

"You're not alone," he replied softly. "Whenever a producer puts on a new play, he always forgets the name of Osterman!"

They are in the typical English model pictured, with raglan shoulders, notch collar and pyramid pockets. To be had in beaver-shade or brown, and in misses' sizes 14 to 20.

It is a coat for the young woman who is thrilled more by a coat's velvety texture which continues to impart satisfaction through the garment's term of service, than by a flaunting beauty which merely pleases the eye.

Turning attention to the problem of making the homes more comfortable, more beautiful for fall and winter, feature offerings of furniture and furnishings at special prices have been arranged for this week.

TORCH MURDER AUTO FOUND

The stolen automobile used by the "torch" murderers of Sam (Toto) Amarosa, partner of Jack Palmere, bootleg supply king, was recovered early today in Milltown, Plum Township, according to a report to county detectives. Amarosa's burning body was found last Thursday in a thicket in Peterson's Hollow near Turtle Creek, a few hours after Palmere was shot to death in Wylie avenue.

Detectives rushed to the scene in an effort to pick up the trail of the alleged slayers. Neighbors told Constable John Biggerstaff, who recovered the automobile, it had been parked in Milltown since 11 o'clock yesterday morning.

Other detectives continued their search for George Maffata, cousin of Amarosa. A former sweetheart of Palmere also is being sought.

Steel Institute Meetings Continue

Sessions of the semi-annual convention of the Institute of Scrap Iron and Steel were to be continued today at William Penn Hotel. The three-day meeting will close tomorrow. Benjamin Schwartz of New York is director general of the institute and Charles Dreifus of Pittsburgh is general chairman of the conference committee.

INJURED, JAILED AS 'DRUNK'

Picked up by Wilmerding police last night in the belief that he was drunk, Elmer Kelly, 51, of 1710 Penn avenue, Wilkinsburg, was taken to McKeesport Hospital today, where he was said to be suffering from a fractured skull and is in a serious condition.

Kelly was placed in a cell, police told the hospital authorities, the latter said, and when he could not be aroused this morning they took him to the hospital. Relatives of Kelly, who had been ill, made a city-wide search for him last night.

Slain Monessen Extortionist Buried

CHARLEROI, Pa., Oct. 13.—Michael Karik, 36, of Monessen, slain by state troopers when he walked into a trap which they had laid to frustrate his attempt to blackmail Mayor Carl F. Woodward, was buried yesterday in Grandview Cemetery, where only a few months ago a similar tragedy occurred as troopers shot it out with a blackmailer.

Karik died in the Charleroi-Monessen Hospital here Saturday morning. He refused to answer questions and made no statement concerning two threatening letters which he addressed to the Mayor of Monessen, demanding a large sum of money.

Co-Eds Must Pay Half of 'Date' Expenses

TUCSON, Ariz., Oct. 13.—(INS)—The depression in the "date" industry ended today at the University of Arizona.

Men students of the University at a mass meeting computed costs of a "date" at $1.98, voted that the co-eds should pay one-half the expense because of "critical business conditions" and agreed unanimously that the girls could ask for "dates" with propriety.

The co-eds, led by heads of 32 sororities and honor organizations, said "O. K."

CHEATS MOVIE, DRAWS FINE

John Rose, 18, of Thirty-ninth street, explained in Morals Court today that after buying a ticket and entering a theater yesterday he had opened an exit door admitting his two companions, John Kearney, 17, of 331 Thirty-ninth street, and Howard Reichenbach, 17, of 347 Manion street.

Theater representatives said they had been trying to stop the new "racket" for several weeks. Rose was discharged by Magistrate T. D. Jones. The other two were fined $5 each. They were charged with being suspicious persons.

OPERA ROMANCE HOLDS PUZZLE

WEST NEW YORK, N. J., Oct. 13.—(AP)—The marital status of Hilda Burke, Chicago Opera Company soprano, and Desire Defrere, Belgian baritone, remained a jigsaw puzzle on denials and assertions today.

In Baltimore the couple said they were married in West New York, N. J., last Thursday after failing to obtain a license in New York and Newark, N. J.

But the license, maintained Assistant Town Clerk Harry Swensen, is still in his office here.

The Rev. John Lehnert, who was said by the singer's mother to have performed the ceremony, denied he married the couple. But he added "call me up in two weeks and I'll tell you," then he hung up.

Mrs. Walter J. Hopkins, the prima donna's mother, said in Baltimore she "knew" her daughter and the baritone were married by Mr. Lehnert because, she said, she was there with her husband as witness.

To cap it all, a William Murphy, who signed the license as a witness, could not be found at the address he gave.

Roosevelt Honored At Dixie Barbecue

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Oct. 13.—(INS.)—Two thousand persons gathered at a barbecue here today in honor of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York.

Although politics have been placed on the taboo list, the barbecue, given by the Meriwether County Roosevelt-for-President Club, marks an assemblage of Dixie's political powers to pay tribute to the man sought in the South for the nation's highest honor.

SEIZED ALCOHOL HELD BY U. S.

Three thousand gallons of denatured alcohol seized by prohibition agents in a freight car in the North Side yards of the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh Railroad, was removed last night to the government warehouse. The alcohol, valued at more than $2,700, will be held while the legality of the shipment is being investigated.

Agents reported the alcohol had been shipped from Camden, N. J., without a government permit. The shipment was located Saturday and was kept under surveillance by government men in hope that an attempt would be made to move it.

CANNON SCORES JURY HEARINGS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—(INS.)—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., charged in a statement today that United States District Attorney Leo A. Rover had refused to permit him and other important witnesses to testify before the federal grand jury.

The jurors have completed their investigation of the bishop's handling of funds of the 1928 anti-Smith campaign, and are expected to report their findings Friday. They were asked to decide if, in their opinion, Cannon violated the federal corrupt practices act by failing to report to the House all campaign money collected and spent.

The Rice Method for Rupture is known the world over. You can now see this Method demonstrated and have a Rice Appliance fitted to you. Absolutely no charge unless you are satisfied to keep the Outfit after having the Appliance adjusted and you see how perfectly and comfortably it holds. No harsh, deep-pressing springs; nothing to gouge the flesh and make you sore. Can be worn night and day with positive comfort. Soft, rubber-like composition pad, any degree of pressure required.

Don't wear a truss all your life when thousands have reported cures through using the Rice Method. Why suffer the burden of rupture if there is a chance to be free from truss-wearing forever? Anyway, it will cost you nothing to come in and learn all about the Rice Method and the wonderful opportunity for help and cure it offers in your case. Remember these Experts will be here only six days, then your opportunity will be gone. Just ask at the hotel desk for the Rice Experts and they will do the rest. Call any time from 9 a. m. to 12 noon, 2 to 5 p. m., or 7 to 9 evenings. Women and young children receive personal attention of Lady Expert in separate apartments.

Don't miss this great opportunity to see these Experts on Hernia.

PLEASANT RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Shoulders droop under the weight of years. Young yet beauty has fled. Cheeks are sallow and drawn. Unsightly pimples. Keep your system clean and you keep the beauty of youth. Its energy, its zest, its charm. Then life is not a failure.

Clogged bowels and inactive liver cause poisons to seep through the system. Health vanishes and with it beauty and energy. Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets will help save you from this dark hour. For 20 years they have been prescribed in place of calomel to men and women seeking health and freedom from constipation. They act easily and smoothly. No dangerous griping. Take nightly before retiring. Results will amaze you.

Thousands of men and women would never be without Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets, a vegetable compound. Know them by their olive color. 15c, 30c and 60c. All druggists.

Gray Hair

Best Remedy is Made At Home

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

BRAUN VISIONS SUCCESS OF CREDIT POOL

Bank Head Proposes Group Here to Administer Funds; To Attend Hoover Meeting

Organization of the National Credit Corporation, being formed to administer the $500,000,000 credit pool proposed by President Hoover to aid banks, will be completed within a short time, Arthur E. Braun, president of the Farmers Deposit National Bank and former newspaper publisher said today following notification of his appointment to serve on the board of directors.

The formation of a local group to administer the fund in this district will follow closely on the completion of the national organization, Mr. Braun declared.

He stated that it is improbable that the entire fund subscribed by banks will be needed. While the National Credit Corporation can call for the subscription in full, it is generally expected that only about 20 per cent will be required.

Mr. Braun will attend the first directors meeting in New York on Saturday.

Mr. Braun is one of 12 bankers representing the 12 Federal Reserve districts of the country named as the directorate to administer the $500,000,000 fund for bank relief. The Hoover plan, hailed by bankers everywhere, has been indorsed by the Pittsburgh Clearing House Association.

Serving on the directorate of the credit corporation with Mr. Braun are:

Boston—Daniel G. Wing, chairman, First National Bank.

New York—Mortimer N. Buckner, chairman, New York Trust Company.

Philadelphia—Livingston E. Jones, president, First National Bank.

Richmond—John M. Miller, Jr., president, First and Merchants National Bank.

Atlanta—John K. Ottley, president, First National Bank.

Chicago—George M. Reynolds, chairman, Continental Illinois Bank and Trust Company.

St. Louis—Walter W. Smith, president, First National Bank.

Minneapolis—Edward W. Decker, president, Northwestern National Bank.

Kansas City—W. S. McLucas, chairman, Commerce Trust Company.

Dallas—Nathan Adams, president, First National Bank.

San Francisco—Frank B. Anderson, chairman, the Bank of California National Association.

PITTSBURGHER RELIEF LEADER

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—American engineers are getting together to help one of their number lead the United States back to prosperity.

The American Engineering Council, organized in 1920 under the leadership of President Hoover, is going to enlist the aid of 100,000 engineers in a movement to increase and stabilize employment and to prevent the adoption of what it believes would be unwise legislation with respect to unemployment.

F. J. Chesterman of Pittsburgh, vice president and general manager of the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania, has been appointed chairman of the engineers' national committee.

It will work with the President's relief organization, of which Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, is head.

Kinnard Is Made Mason-on-Sight

Social Worker Dies In New York Hotel

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Mrs. John W. Blodgett, 68, of Grand Rapids, prominent social worker and wife of a Michigan financier and lumber man, died suddenly during the night at the St. Regis Hotel on Fifth avenue.

HOMELESS BOY WILL BE TAKEN TO 'GRANDMA'

Mother Disappears After Leaving 'Buddy,' 3, With Family; Goes to Hunt Job

"Buddy," 3, whose mother is said by police to have disappeared after leaving him with strangers, is to be taken to the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Hyde, of 2322 Atmore street, today.

Patrolmen Harry Sauselein and Arthur Jennings, of the North Side radio scout car, located the boy's grandparents several hours after his plight was explained to them by Mr. and Mrs. Isaac D. Friedman of 1202 Palo Alto street, with whom the child had been left.

Neither Mr. Hyde nor his wife, both of whom are employed, could be reached by police, but the officers said they would question them tonight when the boy will be taken to their home.

The mother, known only as Helen, told them, the Friedmans said, she was out of work and asked for shelter until she obtained a position. She left Sunday and failed to return, police said.

FALLEN BLIMP HUNT RENEWED

GALLIPOLIS, O., Oct. 13—(AP.)—Still mystified by reports that an object resembling a blimp fell into the hills of West Virginia across the Ohio River from here Saturday, Robert Henke, local contractor, said he would conduct another search of the area today.

Two days of intensive hunting through the wooded, rough country has failed to disclose any trace of what might have fallen from the skies, and the search was abandoned by all but Henke. Henke himself thought he saw a blimp fall, having been watching the skies with field glasses.

GOOD NEWS FOR THOSE WHO LIKE COFFEE

"I like a good cup of coffee with every meal but I used to suffer when I drank it," says Edward J. Owens, well-known salesman of 86 Falmouth Street, Boston, Mass.

"I tried many things before my druggist persuaded me to take some Pape's Diapepsin.

"I have a better appetite. Now, I can drink coffee even late at night, eat lobsters, pork or anything I want and sleep like a baby."

Get a package of these candy-like tablets from your druggist. They stop heartburn, gas on stomach, belching, nausea, headaches or any other symptom of indigestion soon as the trouble starts.

Police today were still searching for Floyd Martin, alleged jewel thief, whom they released on a $100 forfeit only to learn later he was wanted for jumping a $20,000 bail bond in West Palm Beach, Fla.

Detective William Sullivan arrested Martin and his companion, James Davis, Sunday in a downtown hotel. Sullivan, unaware Martin was wanted elsewhere, set bail at $100. Davis was held for further investigation.

DUNN TOO BUSY FOR POLLS JOB

Thomas A. Dunn, president of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce and two years ago unsuccessful Democratic candidate for Mayor, today was the Democratic nominee for inspector of elections in the Nineteenth District of the Fifth Ward, his home—an office to which he did not aspire. His election is virtually assured. Said Mr. Dunn:

"It's a joke. Someone wrote my name on the ballot. I wouldn't serve if I was elected. I'm too busy."

PLAN NEW ACTS TO ENTERTAIN KOMIC CLUB

Members All Enthusiastic Over Chapter Meetings; Goal Now Set at 50,000

Hundreds of boys and girls who attended chapter meetings of the Warner Theaters-Sun-Telegraph Junior Komic Club Saturday are still talking about the good time they had and are proudly showing the attractive official club buttons they received to boys and girls in their schools and neighborhoods.

A movement was begun at some of the chapter meetings for each member to bring one new member, boy or girl, for enrollment next Saturday. If you are a chapter member and the matter was not taken up last Saturday, you are instructed to bring along all the new members possible. Don't stop at one—get two, three or four.

"Let's make it 50,000 before Christmas."

PLAN NEW STUNTS

In the meantime the management of the Warner Theaters and the Sun-Telegraph are making preparations for new stunts in the way of entertainment and activity for the Junior Komic Club. Among these is the presentation of special programs one Sunday afternoon a month at the Stanley Theater. Watch the Sun-Telegraph for details about these big Sunday affairs.

The Sun-Telegraph has been swamped with applications for membership. They have come in so fast that the secretary has been unable to catch up in the work of sending out buttons and cards. However it is expected that this work will be completed today and that by tomorrow or next day every youngster who has asked for buttons and cards will be taken care of by mail.

LETTERS RECEIVED

With the application for membership have come many pretty letters from boys and girls telling how glad they are that they can join the Junior Komic Club. All these letters will be answered by the secretary.

Now, boys and girls, don't forget. Do a little extra work this week for the good of your club. Go out and get as many new members as possible. If you live in the vicinity of the Warner Theaters where there are chapters take your new members to one of these theaters for enrollment next Saturday. If you do not live conveniently to one of these theaters, send in the application blank on this page and you and your members will be assigned to a chapter.

Application for Membership in the Sun-Telegraph

High School Editors Will Hear Writers

Reporting and editing of news will be discussed by local newspaper men tomorrow afternoon at a meeting of the staffs of high school publications in the Pittsburgh Academy. The meeting opens the course in publication practice being sponsored by the academy.

The speakers tomorrow will be Mark Shields of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph; Harvey Gaul, of the Post-Gazette, and Roscoe Fleming, of the Pittsburgh Press. W. C. Arthur, director of advertising courses at the University of Pittsburgh also will speak.

STEP-BY-STEP INSTRUCTION DIAGRAMS GIVEN WITH THIS PATTERN

By ANNE ADAMS

Extremely youthful, but sophisticated, too, is this frock with gracefully flared jabot and dainty lace vestee. The new puff sleeves with snug wrist portion and the low placed skirt flare are details of interest this season. Cream lace is lovely against black, or the new shades of brown, blue, green and dull red. For fabric choice, satin, velvet, canton crepe or sheer woolen will be suitable.

Travelers Society Aids 110 Children

The Travelers' Aid Society of Pittsburgh aided 110 children traveling alone during September, according to a monthly report made public today. Five were hitch-hikers, four traveled by bus and the remainder by railroad.

When children won't eat—and won't gain weight—

Try This!

The youngster who has no appetite, probably has stasis. A little fig syrup will soon correct this condition—then watch the child eat—and gain!

Mothers should never coax a child to eat. Nature knows best. Remove the cause of a youngster's poor appetite—get rid of stasis. Children who don't eat are sluggish. Read what the "California treatment" is doing for sluggish, listless children in every part of the country!

A Pound a Week

Your child will eat well from the day and hour you conquer sluggishness. But that girl or boy with furry tongue and a bad breath should not be dosed with salts!

Begin tonight, with enough pure fig syrup to cleanse the colon thoroughly. Less tomorrow, then every other day, or twice a week, until the appetite, digestion, weight, complexion, tell you the stasis is gone. When a cold or other ailment has again clogged the system, fig syrup will soon set things to right.

When appetite fails, tongue is coated white, eyes are a bilious yellow, California fig syrup will gently stimulate the colon muscles—and the child you used to coax to eat will fairly devour his food.

Just One IF—The claims made for California Fig Syrup are true and it will do the same for you—IF you get genuine CALIFORNIA fig syrup. Don't accept any of the substitutes.

POOR COMPLEXION?

Smoother, Clearer Skin *overnight!

Nurses advise this simple night treatment

TRAINED nurses first discovered this thrilling beauty secret. Then, their friends and patients. Today over 4,000,000 women use this corrective night cream to clear and refine their skin!

They scarcely believe their eyes when they see how much softer, smoother, clearer it makes their skin—in just 8 hours. It's not imagination. They can actually feel the difference—their mirror shows them.

Yet it's easy to understand this big overnight improvement, when you know what's in Noxzema Skin Cream. It contains bland, soothing oils that soften the skin and sooth away toughness. A mild medication that quickly heals away distressing blemishes. Gentle astringents that close enlarged pores and refine the texture of the skin—leaving it satin-smooth, glowing with youthful loveliness.

There's nothing like Noxzema—you'll know this the moment you smoothe it on. Not simply because you'll like its dainty, snow-white creaminess—but because you'll really feel it start healing right away.

If you want clear, radiant skin beauty, get a small jar of Noxzema Cream. Use it tonight. Tomorrow morning, see for yourself how much fresher, smoother, finer textured your skin has become. Don't put off the happiness this new attractiveness will give you. Get your small jar of Noxzema Cream at any drug or department store today.

We Now Present

By Darrell V. Martin
Radio Editor

THEME SONGS, they say, have wielded a tremendous influence in building radio audiences for sponsored features . . . a prominent New York production man whose word is Blackstone with his network associates has ventured the premise that 25 per cent of the Amos 'n' Andy audience has come back night after night to hear first the Perfect Song . . . then Amos 'n' Andy . . . and if this is right we might as well felicitate the same sponsor for his superb judgment in picking Toselli's Serenade or Rimpianto, as the theme song for The Goldbergs . . . We presume that Amos 'n' Andy and The Goldbergs, together or individually, have as many listeners as any program or programs on the air . . . this popularity is attributed in no little part to wise psychology in choice of theme songs.

Darrell V. Martin

Question a Day:

This Croonin' Sam on Sunday nights WJAS sounds a lot like Bing Crosby. Do they use Crosby phonograph records? Eileen M., Duquesne.

Answer—No, no. Croonin' Sam is really Sam Gottesman, 20, of Uniontown, Pa. You've probably heard him singing vocal refrains with Nat Brusiloff's Orchestra on CBS.

Morton Downey and the Boswell Sisters started in where Kate Smith left off at the Palace Theater, New York, yesterday . . . Kate holds the all time record of 11 consecutive weeks.

Studio Lights

Tenors have become alarmed at the number of baritone voices permeating the ether lately . . . but the networks insist it's only an effort toward more variety . . .

"Say OK on the air and I'll send you two boxes of candy," wrote a Ligonier maiden to the KQV staff . . . Next day Tony Lombardo used a little ingenuity. "Shall I play 'Roses of Picardy'?" he asked Fullerton McGough . . . "OK," answered the announcer and sure enough two boxes of candy arrived in a later mail.

Virginia Harmon, possessor of one of the sweetest soprano voices in Pittsburgh radio, is due back on WCAE soon with Paul Gannon, tenor . . . Virginia has been in Texas . . .

The xylophone section of a radio orchestra is known as the "woodpile" . . .

As an added feature of Sacred Songs on KDKA at 7:30 tonight the Sponsor presents Louise Clark, violin and organ . . .

Football games Saturday—WJAS, 1:15 p. m., Army-Harvard, Ted Husing; WCAE, 2:15 p. m., Army-Harvard, Graham McNamee; KDKA, 2:45, Chicago-Yale, Bill Munday . . .

Marie Ross, 1229 Second avenue, Coraopolis, has organized a Pennsylvania branch of the Club Conrad, boosting Lew Conrad, NBC tenor, who comes back on the air tomorrow night from Boston . . .

The red network of NBC is to carry the dedication of the Theodore Roosevelt Memorial Hospital in New York on Tuesday, October 27, with Gov. Franklin Roosevelt and Mayor Jimmy Walker among the speakers . . .

Russ Columbo's full name is Ruggerio Rudolfo Eugenio Columbo . . . Russ is a nickname . . .

"After all," says Eddie Cantor in his radio campaign for President, "I can sing. I ask you! Can Hoover or Coolidge croon?"

How's this for novelty? CBS plans to pick up the voice of the Street Singer (Arthur Tracy) from a blimp flying over Manhattan next Monday.

A radio rally dedicated to American colleges with President Herbert Hoover the principal speaker, has been arranged for NBC-WCAE Saturday night, November 14 . . .

CBS has declared war on Amos 'n' Andy . . . Beginning Monday, November 2, and running five nights a week, a CBS commercial sponsor is to spend $1,500,000 for a new act having five principals and an orchestra to go on the air at 7 o'clock sharp . . . The fact that CBS has never pitted a commercial against Amos 'n' Andy is mute testimony to a waning popularity of the NBC stars . . .

Bach's "Fugue in C Minor," Handel's "Water Music" and Purcell's Concerto impressed us most in Stokowski's brilliant concert last night . . . truly Stokowski is the "Columbus" of radio music technique . . . high and low tones were miraculously sharp . . . and the famous conductor's love for French horn echo effects predominated, much to the satisfaction of fans who like bass tones . . . it would have been worth six times the price of admission to perceive the great Stokowski's temperament when someone very close to the microphones coughed three times in the middle of the concert . . .

Another special . . . the restoration of Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence, on the red network from Charlottesville, Va., next Tuesday afternoon at 4 . . .

* * *

Today's Tid-Bit

George Jessel (NBC Friday night, October 23) made his first vaudeville appearance in 1909, teamed with Walter Winchell. Each was paid $4. Eddie Cantor later went on the bill with them at $15.

* * *

Man Arrested Near North Side Plant

Detected, police say, in the act of leaving the plant of the Vernon D. Price Company at South and Allegheny avenues, Andrew Wethouse, 31, of 1924 Beaver avenue, was arrested and lodged in the North Side Police Station.

GREASY HAIR FROM—

LAZY GLANDS

Hair that is full of grease and has an odor is due to a gland disorder. Soap and water won't help. Face the truth about your scalp!

When the scalp oozes oil from every pore, the glands are wasting nourishment and need attention. Stimulate those lazy glands and all that grease and scale will go. And watch what happens to the hair itself, when properly nourished!

Gland stimulation gives hair new life and new color. You won't have any streaks to "touch up" or gray locks to hide. Pigmentation will slowly but surely revive the natural color of any hair not completely and permanently gray. Start stimulation of those lazy glands tonight! The way to wake them is by massage. Use your finger-tips, dipped in Danderine. The Danderine will cut through the pore filth and get at the gummed glands.

One treatment will dissolve every particle of dandruff. The first week will give you a healthy, wholesome scalp. But keep the treatments up until the very feel of your hair tells you it is in perfect condition.

You can get Danderine at any drugstore. It is a marvelous medicine for sick scalps.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The human interests side of Wall street ought to excite the grandees of the radio if they're really sincere in their search for novelty.

Can't we have an end of the economic talks and a little more attention given to the little dramas that have been taking place in the financial marts since Coolidge retired to his Northampton fireside? . . . And while we are about it a series of talks by the great spendthrifts of the world would be something new on the air.

Fancy hearing Count Boni de Castellane, Harry Thaw, Jack Johnson tell how they made their money fly! . . . Holland's radio programs are becoming almost as scarce as Holland's brandied chocolates . . . Most neglected in air announcements of the radio parade are the professional accompanists. The virtuoso of the hour is introduced with considerable pomp and no little ceremony, but the accompanist at his piano, unless he be a Frank La Forge, is as unhonored as a Balkan delegate to the League of Nations.

The Hooverian voice is becoming more and more audible as the political conventions approach. The presidential race has already begun on the microphones. Entries are feeling out their audiences, learning the response of the armchairs to their personalities if not to their opinions . . . Campaign speeches can't come too soon if only because they will bring a halt to political punch-pulling . . . Campaign speakers are in the habit of checking their manuscripts with their black federas and talking right out in meeting.

Frankness on the air is a rare virtue, but its practice invariably holds the eardrums . . . Now it is Louis Sobol who becomes a radio master of ceremonies in a program called "The Voice of Broadway" . . . Throaty voices are rare on the air. Perhaps that's why we're specially curious to hear Tallulah Bankhead.

Faded Glories of Vienna In New Guild Comedy Naughty and Nice

By GEORGE SEIBEL

"Never in my entire life have I had so much fun," says the bourgeois father in law of the intellectual psychoanalyst's mondaine wife. "Neither have I," she answers, and that brings down the curtain upon the latest Theater Guild play, the latest Robert E. Sherwood comedy, the latest Lunt-and-Fontanne acting triumph.

George Seibel

Whether the large audience at the Nixon would say the same thing is a question of temperament. The very nice people may think the play is naughty; the very naughty may think it is nice. Both will be somewhat puzzled. Has it a moral—or an unmoral—is it a satire—is it a case in psychoneurotics?

Perhaps it is all these things.

It is not another "Elizabeth the Queen;" it is not another "Road to Rome"—but it is a daring exhibit of the modern Viennese comedy as practiced by the modern Hungarian school.

And it is acted by Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne with that absolute ferocity of finish which these artists have attained in a wide-flung repertoire.

HUSBAND AND LOVER

After a first act that moves slowly and brings in a number of people for no better reason than to establish the fact that Eleana is married to a great psychoanalyst, the heroine goes to a reunion of ex-Hapsburg has-beens for no better reason than that her husband wants her to face her past, for she has been the mistress of a Hapsburg.

This same Hapsburg shows up at the reunion determined to possess Eleana again. She eludes him after a duel in which her coquetry is opposed to his violence.

The Hapsburg, who has turned taxi driver, [illegible] her home and encounters the husband.

"I've known some husbands in my time," he says, "but you're the first one that has given me a kind word."

Then the duel is resumed with the husband, while the wife watches the rapier-play of the rival wits.

Psychoanalysis, "the sole remaining Viennese industry," is pitted against the brutal egotism of the ancient dynasty.

As it turns out, the archduke is a loud loafer, but the psychoanalyst is a smooth imbecile. No doubt if there were a fourth act Eleana would hunt herself a real taxi driver.

CLICQUOT AND CAVIAR

The comedy is all clicquot and caviar, though they are not brought on until the second act, just as Frau Lucher, played with gusto and a black cigar by Helen Westley, doesn't bring on her clicquot and caviar until the archduke joins the party.

Epigrams and double entendres and many single entendres fly thick and fast at times, but it is hothouse hilarity after all. The lady so ravishingly played by Lynn Fontanne is the same languishing lady of vacillating taste that Hannibal met on the Road to Rome. The archduke with a leaning to epilepsy acted with so much bravado by Alfred Lunt is a new composite type with a dash of Richard III and a flash of Don Juan. But he has read Freud—and that brings him up-to-date.

Outside of Helen Westley there was commendable work done by Henry Travers in the imbecilic role of the psychoanalyst, and by Minor Watson as the bourgeois father who was once a shoemaker and now loves his wireless. Eduardo Cianelli was the only one of the ex-aristocrats who wore an illusion of aristocracy under his guide's vesture. The remainder of the large cast were adequate but no more.

"Reunion in Vienna" is much fun but little more than that. As Mercutio says, 'tis enough, 'twill serve.

Mr. Bickford Drinks a Drink!

"Pagan Lady," a movie of bootleg reform, love and liquor, came into the Davis and Enright yesterday. It is based on the play of the same name and it features a good sized cast, including Evelyn Brent, Conrad Nagel, Charles Bickford, William Farnum, Roland Young, Lucille Gleason, Gwen Lee and Leslie Fenton.

Mr. Young, as a doctor who likes to fish and drink, gives the most amusing portrayal of all. But Miss Brent, as the lady of the title; Mr. Nagel, as the pale young disciple of religion and reform, and Mr. Bickford, as a great big he-man who runs rum and runs after women, complete the triangle that consumes most of the film footage.

Highlights of the drama are a free-for-all fight in a Havana cafe, a rainy night for two in a lonely cottage off the Florida coast and a "New Life" cocktail. The latter will make bartenders gray, if prohibition hasn't done so already.

Wholeheartedly, we recommend this cocktail to diversion seekers. Here are the ingredients: Ice, rye whisky, kimmel, sloe gin, cream, brandy, an egg and Jamaica rum. Season to taste with cayenne pepper and serve in a beer stein.

He-Man Bickford drinks one in the picture and lives to marry the girl at the finale. Of course, this isn't a guarantee that you will survive. You must remember that Mr. Bickford is a movie actor.

Seriously, however, the "Pagan Lady" has an entertainment flavor, though synthetic in spots. And if you watch close you may get the idea that the technical director tasted some of that "New Life" cocktail too.

Heart or Soul Is Problem In Cinema

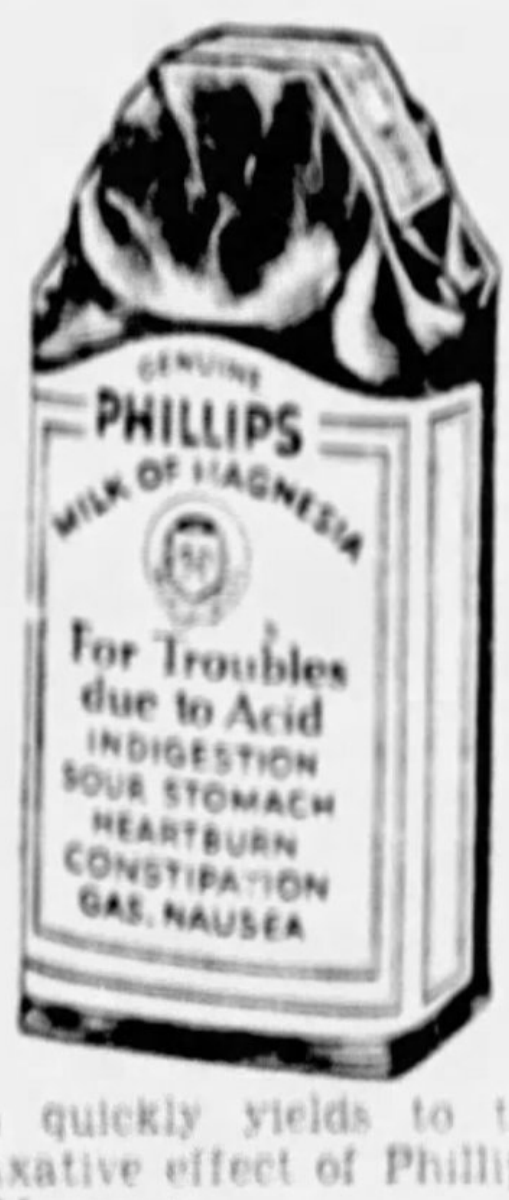
By MILDRED FILLMORE

After a series of comedies and operettas the new Avenue Cinema, presenting German films, turns this week to Alpine scenery and Catholic ritual. It is a serious drama based upon a novel of Richard Voss, entitled "Zwei Menschen" (Two People). It concerns the love of a young Tyrolian noble for the beautiful daughter of a neighboring estate.

Young Rochus is a great hunter and athlete, but his mother's wish is to see him become a priest. The first son of the family has always been dedicated to the army, the second son to the church. In the case of Rochus the matter is complicated by his love for Judith. After the pair has narrowly escaped drowning in a thrilling flood, he is told his mother has made a vow that he should become a priest if saved. After the mother dies it becomes incumbent upon him to fulfill her vow.

He returns to his native mountains as a priest, and has to officiate at a wedding on the neighboring estate. He learns that he still loves Judith, and she opportunely falls off a high cliff to make it easier for him to keep his vow.

The picture is very dramatic, full of tense emotion, replete with vivid pictures of Tyrolean life, and the church ceremonials as well as the Alpine scenery are immensely impressive. The acting of Gustav Froehlich as Rochus and of Charlotte Susa as Judith is sincere and convincing. It is a fine dramatic film which does no violence to the truth of human nature.



SOUR stomach

If fear of what will follow overshadows the enjoyment of your meals, your system may be too acid.

Those pangs of indigestion right after eating and that lump you feel in your stomach for hours after, the flatulence and sourness, are the symptoms of overacidity. Take an anti-acid and neutralize the excess acid. You won't be comfortable until you do.

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia will always check that condition of overacidity. It acts pleasantly, but promptly and most effectively. It supplies needed alkali to neutralize excess acids of the stomach and bowels. Headaches, flatulence and nausea are promptly relieved. Your digestion will speedily improve. Your appetite will be sharpened. Constipation quickly yields to the gentle laxative effect of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Many make a practice of taking a spoonful or two before meals one or two days weekly. It is a delightful way to keep the system always sweet; and to keep the bowels from growing sluggish, also to guard against auto-intoxication.

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia will check a cold in a hurry. Just take a spoonful at three-hour intervals until that weak, achy, feverish condition is gone and your head is all clear.

Get a bottle today, read the directions and learn Phillips' Milk of Magnesia's many important uses. For you and the whole family. 25c and 50c bottles can be obtained at drug stores everywhere.

Skyline Rises On Warner Screen

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Thomas Meighan and Hardie Albright are appearing on the Warner screen in the talkie, "Skyline." This is their second venture together, the first having been in "Young Sinners."

This movie, "Skyline," is built upon the old theme of a father finding a son he never knew he had. The father is a builder of skyscrapers and the son is a boy who dreams he would like to build them.

Maureen O'Sullivan, Myrna Loy and Minna Gombell are in the supporting cast.

WHERE, BUT HOLLYWOOD?

From early moments in the picture, when the boy's mother, dying amid the squalor of a river barge, gives him a token, inscribed "To My Wild Irish Rose," and tells him that the drunkard aboard with them is not his father, it is quite obvious that Mr. Meighan, yet to make his first entrance, will turn out to be the missing parent.

The most active episode in the film comes early, too. It is a fight between the boy and the husky drunkard. The boy takes an awful beating, but he finally subdues the great big man in true movie style. And he jumps from the barge and swims to shore—a feat, which anywhere but in Hollywood would be physically impossible after such an exhausting fight.

Thomas Meighan and Hardie Albright have that certain screen "presence" and personality that arouses interest. And Mr. Meighan has the knack for turning out refreshing portrayals, even in hackneyed characters and plot environment.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Walter Hampden ought to be a great help to folks around his home. He should be an adept in domestic economy. Why? Well, a number of years ago he made a deep impression in the title role of "A Servant In the House." Now he is doing that super-butler role in "The Admirable Crichton," James M. Barrie's comedy that comes to the Nixon next Monday. Fay Bainter is the other featured member of the cast, which also will include Effie Shannon and Sydney Greenstreet, who has played more butlers than Hampden in his time. Seat shoppers will be attended to as early as Thursday.

World premieres of films usually are reserved for Los Angeles or some large city in the East. "The Spirit of Notre Dame," however, which comes Friday to the Stanley, made its bow to the world last Friday in South Bend, Ind., seat of Notre Dame University. The opening was a sell-out and a great social event.

BOMB CHICAGO LOOP THEATER

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Theater bombers have carried their terrorism into the heart of Chicago's Loop.

A black powder bomb, believed by police to have been tossed from an adjoining, taller building, exploded a fraction of a second before it fell on the roof of the Monroe Theater late yesterday.

The rush crowd in the Loop, startled by the noise, scurried to cover. Several hundred patrons inside the theater were uninjured, because the force of the explosioin was spent upward. It shattered windows in the offices occupied by the Chicago Real Estate Board adjoining the show house. Workers there were showered with glass.

It was the second theater bombing in two days, and the twelfth since the Allied Independent Theater Owners Association broke with the Chicago Moving Picture Operators' union over the latter's demands that each theater must hire two operators per shift.

U. S. Couple Unhurt In Chinese Crash

SHANGHAI, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—A message received here today from the Standard Oil Company's Foochow office said the airplane of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Day, of Ridgewood, N. J., was damaged slightly in an attempted takeoff there but neither of the fliers was injured.

They arrived in China two weeks ago on a leisurely air tour around the world. Resumption of the tour will be delayed several days by the mishap.

'Mrs. Moonlight,' in Alvin, Delightful Fantasy, Finely Acted

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Mrs. Moonlight" came to the Alvin last night to greet Mrs. Pitt and a lovely time was had by all. Mrs. Pitt was all dolled up and so was the gentleman with her, for it was a social affair of some sorts, the splendor of attire being a mark of recognition of the beginning of the first subscription season here of the Professional Players, an organization that has been in operation for several seasons in Philadelphia, Chicago and Washington.

The introduction was a happy one, for the significantly smart audience gave evidence at the conclusion of the play of having been charmed by the whimsical effusion that bears an apt title, a play as wistful as a Barrie-made concoction.

WELL-MADE CONFECTION

That, too, is an apt word, for this comedy by Benn W. Levy is indeed a concoction—even applesauce. No, don't protest, for applesauce can be delightful when well made, and this dish is expertly made. Pink applesauce, fluffy applesauce, nice applesauce. Oh, well, if you object, call it a fantasy, but don't say you don't like applesauce, for you swallow a lot of it every day.

Had we time to look in the thesaurus, we might find a lot of synonyms for moonbeams, which is another of the components of the Levy opus, but with a thousand of them we couldn't do better than tell you that it is a lovely love story, strangely and weirdly told, but tenderly and wistfully told, too, and that it is as delightful a bit of—well, applesauce, as you will find in this—or any other—theatrical season. And as well-acted a play as you will find in a blue moon—or a pink one either.

LOVE CANNOT AGE

Peter Pan couldn't grow up, and "Mrs. Moonlight" cannot grow old, and there you have it—the secret—the heart of this fantastic play. She couldn't grow old because she had made a wish—a wish to be young always, so she could hold her husband's love. And she does remain young and she does hold it through years and years, but not as she expected when she made the wish.

Edith Barrett, granddaughter of the noted Lawrence of another generation, is Mrs. Moonlight of the title, and Sir Guy Standing is Mr. Moonlight, and both of them together are as finely suited to the parts they have as if young Mr. Levy had chanced upon them one day and decided to write a play that would fit their personalities. They make you believe that they really are the pair of unreal dears they appear to be, and that is the amplest of praise.

SUPPORT IS FINE

Then there is Frances Rose Campbell, in the role of Minnie, a sharp-spoken and plain-spoken Scotch servant in the Moonlight household—you'll love her, too. Also you will highly esteem the work of the cast as a whole, including Katherine Standing, whom you see grow from a young miss to a middle-aged matron, never knowing that she has a mother who cannot age as she does. Others, all of whom are excellent in their parts, are Leo G. Carroll, Kathryn Collier, John Spacey and John Ross.

If you like good theater, don't miss "Mrs. Moonlight"—even if it is applesauce.

'Spot' Victim Slain Keeping Girl's Date

CONSHOHOCKEN, Pa., Oct. 13.—(AP)—An investigation by detectives has revealed that Ralph Spanish, shot and killed Sunday night, knew he was "on the spot" but refused to leave town because he had "to keep a date with a girl."

Detectives said it was less than three hours after he received the "tip off" that the 23-year-old gambler died from a bullet wound in the abdomen. Police said it was witnessed by the girl, who was in Spanish's car.

DEVISES NEW PLANE CONTROL

Pneumatic control for airplanes, eliminating wires and levers attached to the "joy stick" with which pilots control their ships in flight today, has been developed by a Pittsburgh aeronautical engineer, E. G. McCauley. He recently perfected his invention in the local plant of the Hamilton Standard Steel Propeller Corporation.

Mr. McCauley.

The pneumatic control device consists of a series of small cylinders suitably connected to the control surfaces of a plane such as the ailerons and elevators. A small hand lever which operates on the largest type of plane with a mere flexing motion of the wrist takes the place of the conventional control.

Mr. McCauley plans to manufacture the device in Pittsburgh.

PAPERS LAUDED AT STATE MEET

YORK, Pa., Oct. 13.—(INS.)—Tribute to Pennsylvania newspapers, "especially to the metropolitan press of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia," and the declaration that education is a challenge to the average woman's club in the changing kaleidoscope of social development featured the address of Mrs. John A. Frick, of Allentown, Pa., president of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, at the federation's thirty-sixth annual convention here. She said:

"Adult education is one of the major issues of modern life. Our clubs, therefore, should provide in every community center for study, where we can keep ourselves up to date with current knowledge and with the developments of our time."

Progress of the federation during the current administration, Mrs. Frick said, is attested by the acquisition of 85 clubs, a total of 411 clubs in per capita membership, 54 clubs in associated membership, 106 junior sections, 32 county federations and six associated groups.

Chinese Facing Prison, Wife Hangs Self

HUSBAND FAINTS ON DISCOVERING MATE SUICIDE

Judge Defers Sentence In Narcotic Conviction; Prisoner Claims Body

Pretty Gee She Fong, 22, Chinese wife of 15 months, ended her life by hanging today as her husband prepared to go into United States Federal Court for sentence on a conviction of having violated the narcotic laws.

Yee Fong, 50, Chinese merchant, of 515 Third avenue, the husband, married the girl in Canton, China, in August, 1930. He brought her here and they were happy until last May when he was convicted.

Today he was to go before the Judge to be sentenced. Yee Fong, his heart saddened by his young wife's grief, tried to comfort her, and when her sobs ceased, he went out to buy doughnuts for breakfast.

Gee She was not in their home when he returned. He found only their infant daughter, crying because she was alone. Yee Fong fainted when, searching frantically, he found his wife hanging in a shed in the back of their home.

Unconscious near the suspended body of his wife, he was discovered by a friend, Tom Jack, of 520 Third avenue.

In Federal Court attorneys told the story to Judge F. P. Schoonmaker and asked that sentence be postponed, and when the court granted the petition, Yee Fong hurried to the morgue to claim the body of his wife.

Faith Is Renewed For 60 Days and Notes for Thirty

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

Bankers' pool enables us to let another notch out of the belt.

It renews confidence for 60 days and notes for 30.

The boys finally realized that you can't squeeze 6 per cent out of a turnip.

After that White House conference the bankers decided to throw their old money away and start all over again.

They have changed everything about banking except the hours and the two reliable signatures.

The result is a financial optimism that has been lacking. Now you can walk into a bank with an acorn in your hand, slap it down on the desk and say:

"How much will you lend me on this oak tree?"

It means we have tossed away the eyedropper and are thinking again in carload lots.

It is the American way of doing business. Now for a nice repaint job on the good old days.

HOOVER'S PLAN NOT ORIGINAL, BURKE SAYS

Light Engineers Told How Roman Emperor Provided Aid for Solvent Banks

President Hoover's plan to distribute $500,000,000 to banks is not original with him, according to James Francis Burke, counsel for the Republican National Committee, today in an address of welcome to the Illuminating Engineers' Society in the William Penn Hotel. Burke said:

"Tiberius, Roman Emperor, distributed a hundred million sesterces from the imperial treasury, to be loaned by solvent banks to needy debtors for a period of three years, without interest."

Burke said in greeting the delegates:

"I know of no higher service this body can render than to shed light in dark places and spread the gospel of optimism."

Declaring there is little that is new in the fundamentals of the present situation, he said in A. D. 33, the year Christ was crucified, agriculture and industry faced universal bankruptcy, adding:

"The famous military roads of the Romans were built to relieve unemployment."

Authorities of all branches of the illuminating industry will address the annual convention which will be in session here five days. More than 1,000 delegates are attending.

AKRON STARTS SURPRISE TEST

Receipt of exceptionally favorable weather reports shortly after sunrise this morning caused a last-minute decision by officers of the giant sky queen to take the craft aloft.

The ground crew was hastily mobilized and the huge airship was walked from her mammoth airdock and taken aloft within a few minutes after the decision to fly was made.

Leaving the airport almost immediately, the Akron circled over the business district here while her motors were warmed up in preparation for the tests to be made on the journey today.

CENTER AVENUE PAVING WORK EXPLAINED

City Inspectors Declare Job Normal in Answering Protests Over Slowness

While residents of Center avenue between Aiken and Morewood avenues are complaining of the snail-like speed with which the Pittsburgh Railways Company and the city are having Center avenue repaved, city inspectors today said the project was being pushed through at a normal pace.

It will be completed about November 1, according to Inspector R. V. Hipwell.

Asserting that only a handful of men were working on the project, 2,200 feet of repaving, residents of the district claim they have no facilities for parking, that the noise is a nuisance and that the work could be speeded if more men were put to work.

Hipwell explained:

"The job was started late in August. It took about a month to lay the tracks. They were completed last Thursday and today the curbs are being put in. The contractor, M. O'Herron, will begin laying the concrete within a few days. This is done rapidly, 800 feet or more a day. The laying of the asphalt will follow.

"As soon as this is finished, we'll start digging up the other side of the street and repave it. More men would not help. We have 28 on the job now. It does cause some inconvenience to the people, but that cannot be helped."

Eczema on Head. Hair Lifeless and Fell Out. Cuticura Healed.

"Eczema first started on the back of my neck, and later spread to my ears and the back of my head. My hair was lifeless and fell out when I combed it, and the irritation did not allow me to sleep.

"I used many other remedies for over three months but got no relief. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in four or five weeks I could see an improvement. I continued using them and in about two months I was completely healed." (Signed) Miss Margaret Bailey, 3917 Aspen St., Philadelphia, Pa.

SLAIN BANDIT'S BROTHER HELD IN HOLDUP

Somerset County Resident Said to Admit Aiding Barbecue Robbery Attempt

State police last night arrested John H. Beckan, 26, of Ralphton, Somerset County, as the accomplice of Joseph Beckan, of Cairnbrook, Somerset County, in the robbery of the Ocean Park barbecue, on the Mt. Pleasant-West Newton road early yesterday in which Joseph was killed. The men, police said, are brothers. John Beckan, admitted his part in the attempted robbery, according to the police.

Paul Blanset, 19, who dropped Joseph Beckan with three shots from an automatic pistol, was released on his own recognizance yesterday, pending appearance in court.

The shooting occurred when Blasnet, aroused from sleep in the rear of the barbecue, drew a gun and ordered Beckan, who had forced entry to the place, to surrender. As Beckan closed in on the youth with a bat, Blanset fired three shots, one of which pierced the heart of the intruder.

Blanset then ran into another room and ordered Beckan's companion to put up his hands. The man complied, but when Blanset turned to summon assistance, the captive fled through a window through which the intruders had entered.

INVENTOR RUNS AUTO WITH AIR

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Roy J. Meyers, inventor, predicts motorists soon may refill their tanks with air instead of gasoline.

Meyers yesterday demonstrated an automobile with six-cylinder radial type engine, minus the usual carburetor and ignition and cooling systems, but equipped with a compressed air tank filled to 500 pounds pressure.

He pulled a lever and the car picked up speed quickly and smoothly, with a slight hiss of air from the exhaust valves. The motor was geared so the maximum speed reached was 35 miles per hour, but Meyers said that, with a gear shift and higher powered engine, speeds equal to or higher than those of gasoline-driven cars may be attained.

As the air goes through the engine much of it is recaptured and recompressed, Meyers said. The cooled air returns to the pressure tank, which is heated by electricity from batteries and a generator.

TAMMANY MEN FACE U. S. QUIZ

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Uncle Sam is curious about the incomes of certain Tammany Hall officeholders.

The study of their bank accounts by the Hofstadter committee, which, at the instance of the Legislature, is hunting irregularities in New York city affairs, has attracted the notice of George Z. Medalie, federal District Attorney. He has ordered an investigation of the income tax returns of four Democratic city officials whose bank deposits, totaling approximately $1,000,000, were revealed at hearings of the Hofstadter committee.

Newspapers today said the government investigators had learned two of the men had failed to file income tax returns, though their bank statements showed deposits of several hundred thousand dollars each.

VETS BOOSTING HEARST PLAN

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—(Universal.)—Thousands of unemployed war veterans are hopeful Congress will adopt William Randolph Hearst's plan for a $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan affording relief through public works.

This word was brought to New York today by Darold D. DeCoe, recently commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. This is his first visit here since his election at the Kansas City convention. He said:

"Mr. Hearst's program points the way to alleviation of unemployment distress and during my forthcoming visit to Washington I intend to urge it upon the national leaders with whom I have engagements."

HOOVER DEFERS RAIL AID PLAN

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—With Congressional approval probably necessary, President Hoover's proposed move to strengthen railroad bonds and, indirectly, small savings banks may be deferred for some time.

The Chief Executive and his advisers have been giving intensive study to several approaches to the problem, but no plan has been evolved yet.

Among those which he has considered is a proposal for a revolving fund from which loans could be made to the carriers. The fund would comprise both private and government capital.

As railroad earnings have decreased in the last two years, with a consequent loss in value for their bonds, both savings banks and insurance companies have been affected. Unless earnings increase sharply before the end of the year, the bonds may be removed from the list of preferred securities in which savings banks and insurance companies are permitted to invest under state laws.

Fat Men

I don't care how fat you are or how much you hate to get out and walk a couple of miles. If you will take one-half teaspoon of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning for 4 weeks and cut out pastries, sugar and fatty meats—

You will feel so good—so energetic and the urge for activity will be so great that you will immensely enjoy a daily walk of several miles—and lose fat.

While you are losing fat you will be gaining in energy—in endurance—in ambition.

Just try one 85c bottle of Kruschen Salts; it will last you 4 weeks. After you have taken one bottle the old arm chair won't hold you any more—you'll want to be up and doing—you'll enjoy work—you'll sleep like a top and by reducing surplus fat ought to live years longer. Get Kruschen at any live druggist in America with the understanding that you must be joyfully satisfied or money back.

W. R. Daniels, of Richmond Hill, N. Y., writes: "After 2 bottles of Kruschen, I've removed 3 inches from my belt, feel 25% more active, mind is clearer, eruptions have disappeared. Am 46 years old and feel 20 years younger. I get up feeling 100%. Kruschen sure is great!"

Is There Ever a Time When a Mother Can Be Wrong?

Who should have the youngsters when Mom 'n' Dad have come to the parting of the ways?

Probably 999 women out of 1,000 reading that question will say: "The mother, of course! Didn't she bear the child—and raise it? Then it's hers. No judge has a right to take a child away from its mother. And a man who will leave his wife has no right to the child."

And hearing them Margaret will smile complacently. For that's her argument. But her ex-husband is putting up a lively scrap.

DIVORCED

Suppose you were a judge—

Suppose these facts were given to you, and you had to decide the fate of this little boy—what would your verdict be?

"Dear Miss Martin:

"I wish you would help me. I am having a desperate time trying to hold on to my young son. My husband and I are divorced. It wasn't my fault. I loved my husband. But he was a [illegible] engineer and was often sent to places to work where it was not pleasant to live, so I usually took the children and went to stay with mother when he had a job like that. He worked for a big construction company and couldn't always say himself where he would go.

"But I always had confidence in him. I never dreamed that he would treat me the way he did. You can imagine how heart-broken and furious I was after I found out what sort of man he really was when "Out of a clear sky he informed me he had met and fallen in love with another woman and wanted his freedom to marry her. For a long time I refused absolutely to give it to him. I felt that he had sold me out and I was not going to give him the satisfaction of letting him get away with it. But finally after a lot of trouble I agreed to give him a divorce if he would agree to support the children and let me have them. He did agree and now he has been married to her for five years.

HUSBAND WANTS BOY

"We have three children, two girls and a boy. Now that the boy is getting of an age where I am having some trouble with him, Bob is determined to take his away from me. He says that I am not handling him right because the boy cuts school and doesn't like to study and has been in trouble a time or two with a group of boys he likes to run around with. He claims that Junior needs a man to handle him. I don't believe that.

"And I can't bear the idea of my son living with his father when that father treated me so shabbily. I am fighting every way I know to keep my son.

"Don't you think that is my right as a mother and as a badly treated wife? I am determined that Bob shan't get him. Please help me, won't you? You are a mother and you can understand how I feel ... how any wife and mother would feel after being so badly treated.

MARGARET M.

You're making a lot of noise about your rights. Just how many rights do you deserve? Look at the record of your life as given in your letter. By your own confession you were a bad wife ... and you are a bad mother.

You accepted your husband's money for years but what did you give in return? Nothing!

NOT A MARTYR

When he had to go to unpleasant places you went home to mother. You say he was unfaithful first. You left him to face loneliness and hardship alone and thought only of your lazy selfish self. Then when he at last found a woman who would give him companionship, you considered yourself a martyr!

You—a martyr? Gwan! Don't make me hiccough! You're the Original Grafter lady, and nothing but.

And now you're as bad a mother as you were a wife. You're letting your boy grow up to be a young gangster because you haven't sense or spunk enough to handle him. And you won't let his father try to train him? Why? Because you love the boy? No—because you want to gratify your own spite and console your own wounded vanity.

That's the truth about you, mam, and if I were the judge I'd turn the youngster over to his dad.

But even as I say it I know many will disagree. For the world is filled with citizens who think that "Mamma can do no wrong."

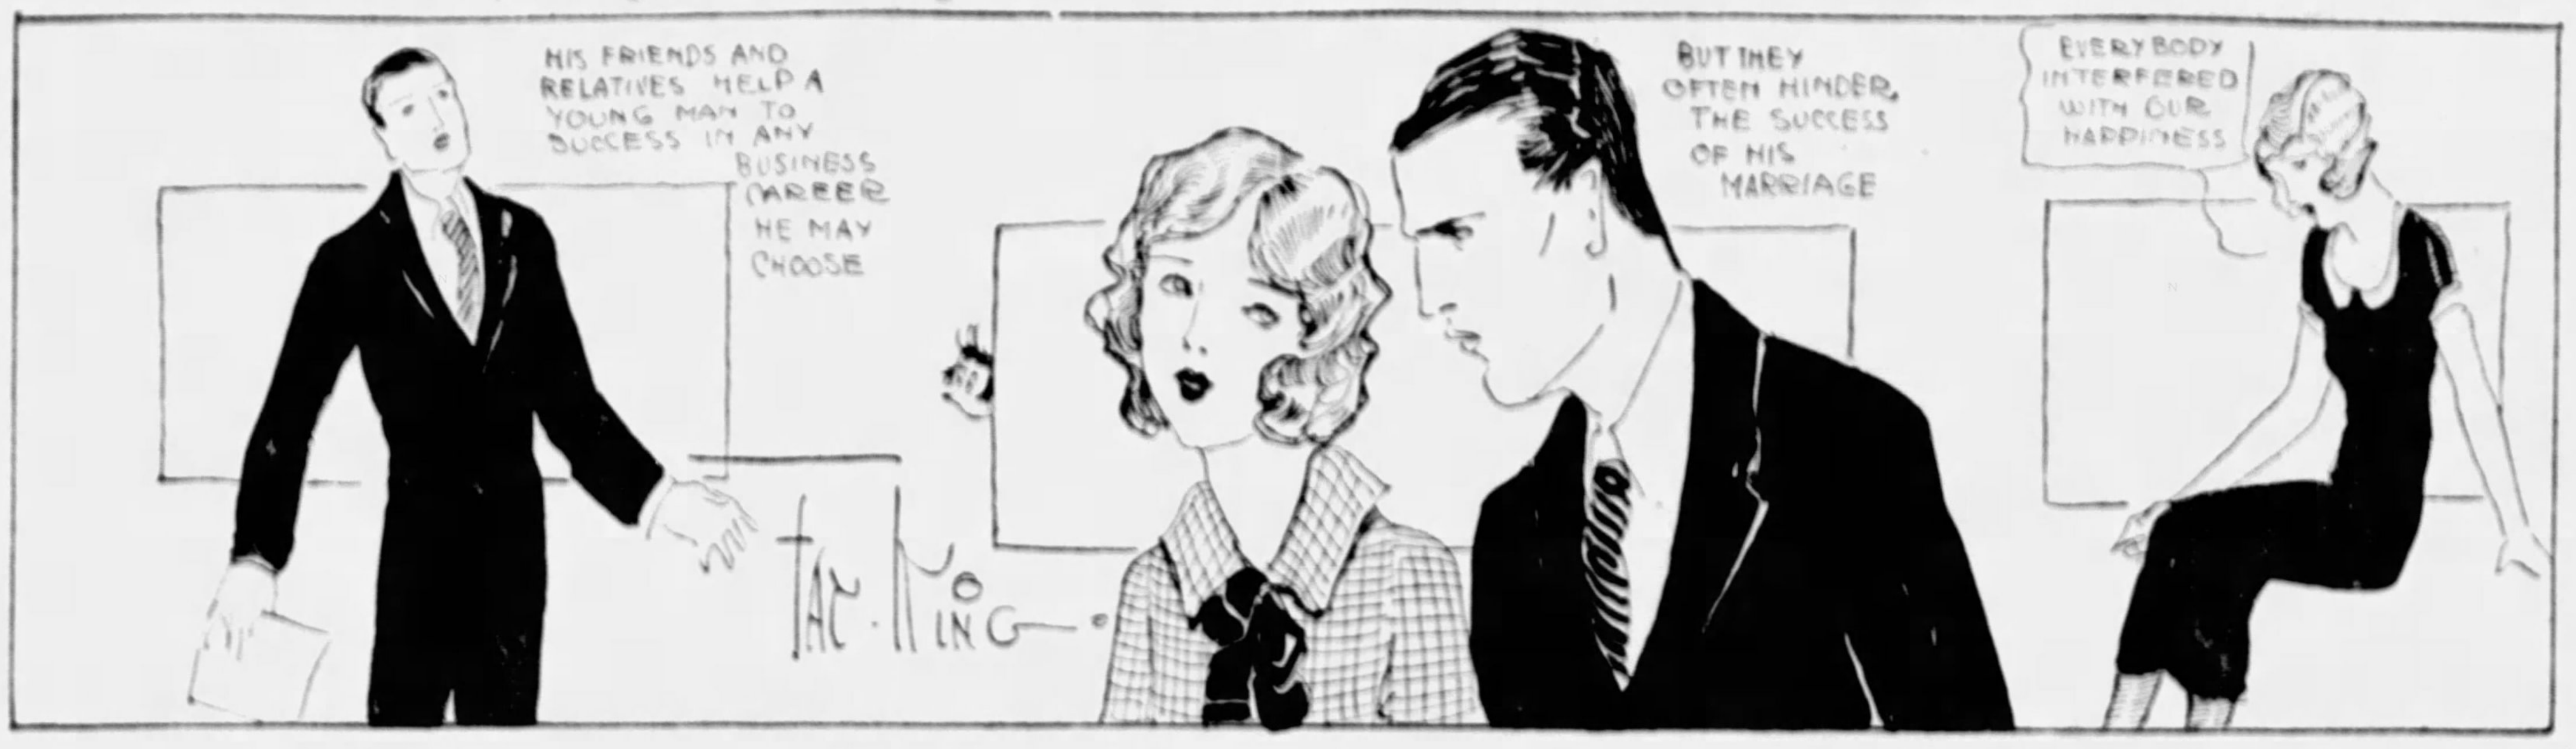
Fay King Advises Against Parents' Interference in Son's Business Career



HIS FRIENDS AND RELATIVES HELP A YOUNG MAN TO SUCCESS IN ANY BUSINESS CAREER HE MAY CHOOSE
FAY KING
BUT THEY OFTEN HINDER THE SUCCESS OF HIS MARRIAGE
EVERYBODY INTERFERED WITH OUR HAPPINESS

By FAY KING

Let a young man decide upon any business career and his family and friends will either help him or let him alone.

If they think he has made a foolish venture into the business world they do not go out of their way to discourage him, but figure it may turn out well after all.

And it often happens that the very venture they had such little faith in, but did not condemn, does turn out to be the family's fame and fortune.

Now if family, friends and relatives would just be as fair when a young man marries, many a marriage that is wrecked by interference might succeed and surprise them.

If you can't approve let them alone. It's their affair. Interference never helps.

Household Hints

The serving of fish is almost a sacred rite and anchovy sauce does not come amiss on this occasion. Mix together one cupful of melted butter and one and one-half tablespoonfuls of anchovy essence or paste; add one teaspoonful of lemon juice and serve hot in a sauce boat.

The centerpiece for a luncheon or dinner table should never be high. A low bowl of camellias or gardenias would be lovely, with ferns dripping from it over a mirror base and tall candles in silver holders placed at either end.

For hard-boiled-egg salad mix together four hard-boiled eggs diced, one diced cucumber, one-half cupful chopped celery, one-half cupful salad dressing. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves.

Not only for the "looks of the thing" but for the taste as well, add the well-beaten white of an egg to mashed potatoes before serving. It will make them fluffier and more delectable.

Roderick Complicates Matters With Apology Proposal

It was Dicky who came to my rescue as I stood pondering how I could manage so that Hank and Bill need not make their first appearance before Marion in the wrinkled clothing in which they had driven down from New York—patently their greatest dread.

"Madge," he called from his door. "Tell Hank and Bill to put on the shoes and socks and shirts and ties and belts they wear with their blue coats and white flannel pants. They can wear any pants they wish and the blue coats which I pressed. Then if we have any luck they can change into the new white flannels at the tailor's and come back the glasses of fashion and all the rest of it—whatever it is—and all ready for dinner."

"Dicky. You are a monumental genius!" I said relieved as I rushed toward the boys' door.

"Business of Modesty yielding to Justice, and acknowledging the truth of your tribute," he called back, vanishing into his room, and I knocked on the boys' door with a grateful little feeling for Dicky's resourcefulness.

"Who's there?" Bill called, and I answered quickly.

"Don't bother to open the door, boys, but listen carefully." I gave them Dicky's message and went back to the telephone, succeeding in getting the numbers for which Dicky had asked by the time he came out of his room.

"Bill Bates says he thinks he has just what you want," I told him, "and the tailor will wait for you, ready to do anything you need."

"Thanks a lot, Efficiency Emma," Dicky said as he went past me, but I caught him by the arm and swung him toward me.

"If the Underwoods come in while you're getting away, don't stop for any parley, just rush the boys off before the girls have a chance to see them," I told him. "The boys are simply frantic for fear——"

"I get you, Stephenson," Dicky said, freeing himself, "and I'll obey orders. But if we don't get started——"

A motor horn blared from below, and the door of the boys' room flew open.

"Isn't that the Underwood car?" Hank demanded.

"If it is, you don't need to get all hot and bothered," Dicky told him. "You and Bill cut down the back stairs, but don't come out through the kitchen till I give you the office. Madge, you go down and get 'em into the house and away from that side veranda. I'll watch my chance to make a get-away."

"Telephone me from Bridgehampton how long you'll be, so I can tell Katie about dinner," I directed.

"All right. What's eating you lads?" as Hank and Bill hesitated.

"You—you don't—" they both began and stopped, their faces a brick red.

"Don't have to tell anybody about the reason for this trip," I finished. "No, there's no need for anybody to know."

"Scoot!" Dicky commanded chokingly, and as the boys raced to the back stairway out of our sight he leaned against the wall helpless with laughter.

"Go on down," he gasped after a second, waving his hands at me, "and ride herd on the Underwoods. Oh, this takes 16 years off my age."

Half-way down the stairs I heard my mother-in-law's voice.

"Margaret, where are you? I want you."

"I'll be with you in a minute, Mother," I called back. "There's something I must do for Dicky."

"Don't bother!" Her voice was crisp, offended. "It isn't important. Yes, yes, Roderick," impatiently. "Go on down. Your arm can't be hurt as much as you thought, or you'd be willing to sit down quietly for awhile."

She went back into her room, and her door closed with the emphasis which spells irritation on her part. With the dubious hope that she might forget her resentment by dinner time, I went on down the stairs, paying no attention to Roderick's hurrying feet behind me. I was annoyed at Roderick's insistence that Hank had burned him deliberately, an insistence which I interpreted as a stubborn disinclination to change his first unreasoning impression of the incident. But when his voice, troubled, appealing, came to me, "Auntie Madge," I turned and smiled encouragingly at him.

"What is it, Roderick?"

He ran down the steps between us and slipped his hand into mine.

"I—I—just want to tell you that Hank didn't burn me on purpose. I thought he did just for a second, and then I knew better. But I just couldn't make my tongue talk any different. Am I awful bad, Auntie?"

"No, I won't say that, Roderick, but it was an awful thing to say of anybody if you were not sure. You know what you ought to do, do you not?"

"Sure, I know. I've got to tell him before the rest that I didn't really think so. Gee!"

He brought up a sigh from his toes, muttered an "Excuse me, please," and clattered past me down the stairs. It was not until he was out of earshot that I realized what his public "confession of sin" would mean. It would betray the embarrassing sartorial trouble which Hank and Bill were so anxious to keep from the knowledge of the girls.

Contract Bridge -:-

OFFICIAL SYSTEM
As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

Partnership Bidding

Almost anything may happen at contract, but we proceed upon what probably will occur. The hand below illustrates a simple case where partners have only one good declaration; they count their tricks and bid their values to the limit.

Hand Y.
♠ Q-9-7-4
♥ A-Q-6
♣ Q-J
♦ 9-5-4-2

Hand A.
♠ K-8
♥ 7-3-2
♣ 10-9-7-2

Hand B.
♠ J-10-5-3
♥ 9-5
♣ K-8-6-4
♦ K-10-3

Hand Z.
♠ A-6-2
♥ K-J-10-8-4
♣ A-5-3
♦ J-7

Z is always the dealer and has the first chance to bid in these lettered diagrams. Z values his hand at just 13 points (6½ probable tricks): Spades, 3 points; hearts, 7 points; clubs, 3 points. He opens with a bid of 1-heart.

A holds two quick tricks, but has no bid. B has one quick trick, and no bid. They wind up by winning one spade and two diamond tricks.

Y's hand counts 7 points (3½ probable tricks), spades 1 point, hearts 4 points, clubs 2 points and his best suit is hearts. Having better than dummy's average support of three tricks, Y must bid 2-hearts. With 6½ probable tricks Z must bid 4-hearts and take his chances of going game, as it is customary for the assisting hand to at once show his full strength by the number of tricks that he raises the contract.

Not knowing who holds the missing king of his diamonds, A's opening lead is his fourth-best club. On this go dummy's J, third hand's K, and declarer's A. Z leads clubs back to allow dummy to win the trick and to be ready to trump a third round of that suit.

Next Z put himself in the lead with his ace of spades, by leading low from dummy; led and trumped his last club; then led the ace of trumps from dummy, followed by the queen, and led his own jack, which picked up the last adverse trump. There was no danger in playing two high trumps on one trick after both opponents had followed suit on the first trump lead, as all adversely held trumps could surely be picked up.

After trumps had been exhausted Z led a small spade towards Y's queen. A had to play his king, leaving Y's queen good for a later trick. A led back his top club; Z ruffed the lead and took his two last tricks with dummy's top spade and his last trump.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Facts About an Ancient Disease

Many persons are overcome with horror at the mere mention of the word "leprosy." It brings to mind many unpleasant thoughts of the suffering of those afflicted with this disease.

Dr. Copeland

Leprosy is one of the oldest diseases known to man. It was prevalent in Egypt for many centuries. History tells of its occurrence as far back as three or four thousand years before Christ.

Throughout the Middle Ages the disease was very common in Europe. At one time it was a real menace. Leper colonies were formed in an effort to isolate these unfortunate people.

For many years the disease was not thoroughly understood. It was not until 1871, when Hansen of Bergen discovered the bacteria which caused the disease, that we knew much about it except its dreadful symptoms. We have learned that leprosy is caused by a germ and that fact makes it easier to deal with the disease.

It is commonly believed that actual contact with a leper will be followed by infection. Yet there are many individuals who have been closely associated with lepers and have not contracted the disease. The fact is, the disease is not as highly contagious as it was formerly believed to be.

Hundreds of physicians and nurses, as well as missionary workers, have been associated with lepers in colonies, some of them for many years. They have avoided infection by simple hygienic care.

Although the disease was first confined to Europe, it gradually spread to the New Hemisphere. It is now estimated that there are about 800 victims in the United States. It is believed there are approximately 3,000,000 lepers throughout the world.

It is only within recent years that any definite success has been made by way of treating this disease. Formerly, it was considered hopeless. The afflicted victim was deported to a leper colony so that he might not be a source of danger to others. This was done without any hope of cure.

As a result of continuous investigation and experimentations, a fairly satisfactory remedy has been found. A certain preparation of "chaulmoogra oil" has been used and has effected some beneficial results.

The oil is obtained from an Oriental tree. After careful preparation it is injected into the patient and in most cases has brought about a considerable degree of relief. A recent report states that 31 persons have been definitely cured and permitted to leave the leper colony.

Individuals suffering from this disease in the United States are usually sent to a federal sanitarium in Louisiana. Here all the comfort and care that can possibly be given are at the disposal of the patients.

There is no patent medicine that can cure leprosy. The chaulmoogra oil which has been used with such great success is not on public sale. It is administered only by those trained individuals who have been working with this medication for many years.

Some persons with the disease are permitted to go about their affairs under direction of the health authorities. Certain types and stages present no danger to others.

Unfortunately leprosy has a disagreeable social significance. Many individuals who have it refrain from seeking medical advice for fear they will be branded as lepers and made social outcasts. Such an attitude is indeed unfortunate. However, apparent success in the treatment of this disease is very gratifying. It gives hope to every afflicted one.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

When blond hair loses its high lights, takes on a dull tarnished surface, the yaller-headed one can try out a lemon rinse, and note results. Sometimes it brings back the natural sunlight and staves off a definite bleaching. To one pint of water add the juice of three lemons. Pour over the head while the hair is wet from the shampoo. Rinse away with tepid water, using a spray.

Fatted calves may not be in the public eye as they were in the dear dead days of the abbreviated skirt, but they are just as hateful. Slim them down by running up and down stairs, jumping rope, kicking, massaging vigorously by placing the hands bracelet-fashion around the legs and letting the hands travel in opposite directions, pulling hard on muscles, tendons and fibers.

Why a blushing skin surface cannot settle itself comfortably on the cheeks where, according to all beauty codes and canons it rightly belongs, but must find lodgment on the nose where it makes itself obnoxious, is one of life's riddles. Local treatment for the ruddy nez consists of applications of ointment of zinc oxide at night. The proper diet is essential. Cut out highly spiced foods, rich dishes and acids. Each day take the juice of two oranges and several glasses of milk. Eat lettuce, together of course with the usual chow that is served.

Hands are a problem to the woman who juggles pots and pans, washes baby clothes every day, who must plunge into dark recesses of pantry shelves or kitchen range and fight dirt. Let her not despair. Her little mitts may not be like fluttering white doves, but they are hands that labor lovingly. She will find that a combination of soapsuds and cornmeal removes grime, imparts softness to the skin. A disappearing hand lotion should be used twice a day. Rubber gloves will protect against the devastating influence of scrubbing agents.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Essence of Courtesy

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it proper to ask a young man into your home if you have known him over a month?

2. Is it proper to keep your hat on when you are at a bridge-luncheon at a hotel, or to remove it?

3. When a young lady is introduced to a young man and they are ready to depart, is it correct for the young man to say to the lady, "I am very glad I met you" or is it the young lady's place?

X.

1. Of course. The hospitality of your home takes this for granted. But, if by your question you meant to ask if this is correct after you have returned from a theater or dance, late in the evening, the answer is different; then it is too late to ask the young man to come in.

2. It is better form to wear your hat at luncheon, whether or not it is followed by bridge. And this is especially true when the party takes place in a hotel.

3. Either can say this with politeness and propriety. It is a charming courtesy to say this, and there is nothing about these simple, straightforward words that should not reasonably be said by either a man or a woman. They are for one human being to say to another.

Accepting Jewelry Gifts

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

If a boy accepts a class ring from a girl (or vice versa) does it mean that they are engaged. If not, what does it mean?

If the above happens in college is there any significance?

If a young man (outside of the family) gives a girl a diamond ring or any other kind of ring for graduation, is there any significance?

M. W.

No ring that is a gift has any significance, can have any significance, unless the giver and the receiver agree on the significance. That is, a diamond ring isn't an engagement ring unless the man who presents it asks the girl to marry him and the girl accepts.

In all three cases you mention above, the only significance that such a gift could have, unless it actually is an engagement and is so intended and received, is the significance of extremely poor taste. A girl whether she is in preliminary school or in college or is graduating from college, or under any other circumstances should not, if she wishes to have any claim to being well bred (or wise), accept a gift of jewelry from a man who is not her fiance.

DEALERS TO HEAR SHOE STYLE EXPERT'S FORECAST TONIGHT

Industry's Fashion Editor To Speak at Dinner

This is Shoe Style Week in Pittsburgh! Fall days are getting brisk and cool. Football weather with a hint of falling temperatures sends men and women scurrying for warmer garments.

Because women usually select shoes as the last item in their seasonal ensembles, the Pittsburgh Shoe Retailers Association believe that now is the psychological time for them to be interested in fall and winter styles in shoes.

Pittsburgh shoe dealers and department stores have felt that no one was better qualified not only to discuss present style trends in shoes, but to predict even the Easter mode, than Madame Hamilton Jeffries, formerly associated with Vogue Magazine and now fashion editor of the Boot and Shoe Recorder, the leading shoe trade journal. She will speak at a pep meeting and dinner dance in the Fort Pitt Hotel this evening.

SHOE STYLE EXPERT

According to R. Bruce Murphy, manager of the Stetson Shoe Shops and chairman of the committee in charge of activities this week, few fashion authorities have the experience, and background of their industry as does Madame Jeffries. He said:

"Having a complete understanding of every operation in the production of a pair of shoes and a practical knowledge of manufacturing costs and production difficulties, her advice is considered valuable by many of the leading shoe manufacturers in the United States."

In addition to her knowledge of the production side of the industry, in prognosticating style trends, her opinions have been widely accepted as an advance picture of what will be smart in shoes six months hence, it is said.

STUDIES IN PARIS

Her forecasts are based upon her contact with every important style source. Frequent trips to Paris give her an intimate conception of the new materials, styles and adopted colors introduced by leading houses in the world's fashion mart. Keenly aware of all the connotations of each new vogue, Mme. Jeffries returns to New York to translate and interpret new influences in terms of shoes. Her ideas are carefully tested for practical application and adaptation to the accepted tastes of American women.

After each new style has been adopted and its acceptance reasonably assured, Mme. Jeffries makes a further study of the complete style picture, from which she designates the correct footwear to be worn with specific types of costumes in the prevailing mode. This process of elimination and careful analysis requires intense research and checking to detect and discard all false promotion of selfish interests.

PREDICTS NEW TREND

Twice a year, at style conferences in New York, of all branches of the shoe industry, Mme. Jeffries discusses new trends in colors, patterns and materials for smart footwear. Upon the recommendations contained in her report, shoe manufacturers design their footwear, which is placed in production to be offered five months later as the correct shoes to harmonize with accepted dress fashions.

Mme. Jeffries, in her address to Pittsburgh shoe merchants this evening, will outline the anticipated spring colors, patterns and materials that will adorn the feet of those who will strut and stroll in the Easter parade next season.

CANNERS ASK OVERCOATS

An appeal for overcoats for 15 drivers who have been taking out trucks in the early hours of frosty mornings to gather fruits and vegetables for the Surplus for Needy Committee's canning activities, has been made by Attorney Harry I. Miller, chairman of the campaign.

The drivers have been making long trips to the rural districts of Butler, Fayette, Greene and Indiana counties, bringing back capacity loads of produce. Those wishing to help the drivers with an overcoat, new or used, may leave it at Helping Hand headquarters, in Water street.

To date more than 165,000 cans of produce have been preserved at the North Side factory operated by the committee. At present small potatoes for use in vegetable soup are needed.

German Ship Owners Boycott Red Ports

HAMBURG, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—A decision to cease dispatching ships to Russia was adopted by German ship owners today on the ground that recent strikes aboard German vessels in Soviet ports had been abetted by Russian authorites.

Advices received here indicated 41 German freighters tied up at Leningrad, Odessa and other ports were involved in a sympathy strike related to labor troubles in Hamburg.

New England Mills Rising From Slump

BOSTON, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Business in many of New England's smaller mills and industrial plants has turned the corner toward prosperity, the New England Council reports.

A compilation of business trends from reports of Chambers of Commerce and Boards of Trade throughout the six states was characterized as "the most encouraging in recent months."

Shoe Colors to Match Coats, Dresses

We buy shoes at so many times and seasons of the year, that we are inclined to forget their exact and important place in the fall scheme of things. And perhaps overlook the slight but significant changes that have come over them since we last bought street shoes.

Abut colors, first. Black, to go with black costumes, of course. Browns, deep, rich reddish shades, and some just a shade browner than black, to wear with all the browns you find in coats or dresses. And they really will match—shoemakers have thoughtfully provided for that.

Of course, there are the dark green or red shoes to harmonize with those costume shades, but those colors are so apt to be trimmed with black and brown, and then shoes may be so well matched to the trimming.

HELPFUL HEELS

Fashion thinks we should stand very straight this year, to enhance the lines of our clothes. Therefore she has provided us with heels a little lower, enabling us to be desirably erect. Besides being lower, heels are slightly broader on all types of shoes, even including evening slippers. The slender Cuban heel is fashionable on all types of shoes for daytime wear.

There is a tendency for all shoes to be cut a little higher. This enables oxfords to step right forward and claim plenty of attention. You may find every type of oxford, from a sturdy one of alligator and calf to go with your tweeds to a delicate affair of suede that belongs beautifully with an afternoon costume of satin or velvet.

OPERA PUMPS

Although oxfords and strap pumps are storming the position held last season by opera pumps, yet operas will still find particular favor for wear with the more formal types of costumes. Many women who find them more becoming than any other more elaborate shoe, will cling to opera pumps for wear with all but sports costumes, and they will be choosing wisely. The step-in pump, gored so it may be high over the instep, combines the simplicity of the opera pump with the instep support of the oxford. It is most comfortable to wear, and very smart to look upon.

The strap shoe will appeal to you if you like a little more design to your shoes. Graceful ankles are emphasized by well-placed straps. The newest type is cut higher, more like an oxford.

The leathers they are made of is the most exciting thing about new shoes. For they seem to have agreed that two leathers in one shoe are far more interesting than one leather. So they begin with a dull surface like kid or calf or suede, and then they adopt for trimming something shiny like patent leather, or something rough like pin seal or alligator. If it's a formal shoe, there will be probably just a narrow trimming of the contrasting leather. On informal shoes, the trimming is employed on the tip and on the back. Some shoes even go so far as fifty-fifty—half one leather and half the other.

BUCKLES BACK

Buckles are coming back to fashion importance, with the tendency to a little more trimming on shoes. Cut steel buckles will lend a distinctive touch to patent leather or suede opera pumps. A simple afternoon costume might gain a great deal by this significant addition.

With good stockings so inexpensive, it's easy to get just the right shades for autumn costumes. Fortunately, the color question is not complicated. Browns and beiges with a taupe cast blend with many costume colors—stockings this winter will look smartest when they are worn quite dark, but sheer enough to give a medium light effects. It's a relief to change from the suntan beiges of summer.

Dull finished hose are candidates to succeed themselves, because they carry on the heavy idea of the heavy coat fabrics, and the wool and silk dress fabrics, most of which have dull surfaces.

Mesh hose will be smart for sportswear, and for evening, but they have no fashionable place for general daytime wear.

Stockings have added other attractions besides those of prices. Manufacturers have been working at lower heels, finer seams, sheerer chiffon, still more even effects, and better fitting— wonder how so much perfection is available at such modest prices!

Jeweler at Hand, Oyster Eater Reaps Pearls

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Vincent S. Kearns, an insurance man, had a jeweler handy when he ate his oysters raw, and made the most of his presence. He called for a waiter as he removed something from his mouth that might have been a tooth. In the light it proved to be round and opalescent. The jeweler, seated nearby, said it was a pearl.

Kearns canceled the call for a waiter and returned hastily to his oysters. When he had finished, 13 pearls lay about his plate. The jeweler, Kearns reported, figured they were worth $600.

Suede Combinations Lead For Autumn Footwear

This is a year when the two words "surface" and "texture," have come to have a great importance in fashion. They are the factors, more subtle than color alone, which lend interest and variety to the individual parts of a costume. A material may be smooth or ever so rough in its weave and present infinite variety in its degrees of roughness and regularity. A woolen may be very much openwork, giving a filmy yet sportsy effect. Surfaces may be very dull or very shiny, with any number of materials each lending its own very special luster or dullness.

The most interesting and subtle contrasts are formed by the combination of two different surfaces or textures to make the entire trimming of a very simple article. One of the most successful dresses in Schiaparelli's collection was simply made of black wool, its only trimming being a scarf arrangement at the neck of a very loosely-knit lacy wool.

SHOES IMPORTANT

Shoes play an important part in the scheme of texture-contrast. The smartest shoes of the season are made of two materials of very different character—a smooth material such as kid or calf with a rough surface such as pin seal or alligator or a dull deep leather like suede with a smooth one like calf, or a shiny one like patent leather.

Suede, because of its rich, reflection-less surface, is the major leather in many of the shoes, forming the background against which the trimming of another material shows up to best advantage.

Naturally, black and brown are the most important shoe shades of the season. No matter what color you wear, for a daytime costume, you will find that it increases in smartness as you add some black or brown in your accessories. Therefore every type of shoe is offered in these two shades, while certain models are presented in greens and reds to match costumes in those colors.

SUEDE COMBINED

In walking shoes or the sports types that go so well with autumn woolens, suede is often combined with calf or a rough leather. This presents a very smart appearance, and makes for increased service.

On more formal shoes of suede, various leathers are used to provide trimming and a touch of contrast. Gunmetal kid, used on black suede pumps or one-straps, gives a contrast both in texture and in shade. In the same way, opalescent kid in beige and brown tones is used on brown suede shoes, and on kid ones as well.

Patent leather is also used on fairly formal black suede pumps and one-straps—its shiny surface making it effective, even in the narrowest bands, aggainst the lusterless black of suede.

Opera pumps, so universally becoming to the foot, are again important this year. They are likely to be cut higher than before, and to be trimmed in restrained fashion with a contrasting leather. Cut steel buckles are smartly worn with suede or patent opera pumps with a formal silver-fox trimmed type of daytime costume, or for afternoon.

Occasionally a shoe goes fifty-fifty between two leathers. One notable example is half of suede, and half of patent or kidskin, the "halves" referring actually to one side of the shoe. This division of contrasting leathers is supposed to make the foot look longer and narrower than it actually is.

BLEND WITH COSTUMES

This year, more than ever before, shoes will be adapted to their costumes and their occasions. There are varying degrees of formality in shoes for daytime and afternoon wear. There are shoes specially styled to go with the smart woolens of the season. There are even several stages of formality, or informality, for sports shoes.

Never was it so easy to select pumps, oxfords, or straps, according to preference. Never was it so tempting to see the shoe that seems to suggest a certain kind of costume, and almost the fabric of which the costume is made. Never was it so simple to find other accessories that tie up with shoes in color and in material.

Prices and styles both tempt us, this year, to have a shoe wardrobe as complete as our selection of costumes, wearing each shoe with the outfit for which it was chosen.

OIL FIELD FIRE KILLS WORKER

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—A giant torch flared in the newly opened Oklahoma City oil field today as efforts were made to extinguish a flaming well, which ignited yesterday and burned a workman to death.

Firemen worked swiftly in an effort to snuff out the 30-foot flame of the No. 2 Gustin producer of the Empire Oil and Gas Company.

The well is about two miles east of the Oklahoma City business district and its great mantle of smoke billowed high on the foggy horizon, in plain view of office workers.

Charles Biddle, farm boss for Sedgwick Oil Company, an Empire subsidiary, lost his life in an explosion preceding the fire.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair

—With—

Patricia Pitt

Poignant "Mrs Moonlight," the Professional Players' Pittsburgh debut play in the Alvin last night, and Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt in "Reunion in Vienna" opening the Theater Guild series for the winter at the Nixon, brought theater lovers of Pittsburgh to town last night. And that means society, always faithful to the arts.

There were so many society folks at the Alvin that the first night suggested a reception for the 400. And never have I seen a more smartly gowned audience. Did you notice the variety of evening gowns this season? And the growing popularity of dinner gowns? And the new long evening wraps are spacious, I'm sure you'll agree.

Society Attends

Of course black and white are always favorites for the theater, but vivid shades had their following, too.

Young Mrs. Edward Purcell Mellon II chose spring green crepe and her sister, Mrs. Sidney A Stewart was in orchid crepe with lace forming cap sleeves.

Mrs William S Moorhead was charming in a gold and old blue lame wrap with a collar of white fox. Mrs Gernon Fisher Jr came with her mother Mrs Edward Vose Babcock. Mrs R Kent Hanson chose a lovely gown of melon pink satin with a bustle effect. Emily Frew wore Kelly green.

Chatting in the lobby were Mrs William Penn Snyder Jr in white satin, Mrs Harvey Childs III, Mrs A P Brill.

Gown Is Striking

Mrs T M Jones III chose a striking gown of orchid satin having a scarf of the same material and Mrs H C Bughman looked charming in a white chiffon gown having turquoise beading at the cuffs of the full sleeves and at the shoulder. Both are members of the Pittsburgh committee. Mrs Frank Weberman, another committee member, chose a frock of American beauty crepe.

Neil Stewart Zang arrived with her aunt Miss Neil Stewart

MRS JOHN W LAWRENCE AT "HUNTLANDS" FOR THE RACES

Mrs Lawrence, her arm in a sling, one of the many society figures at the George R. McNary farm for the horse races.

Other Arrivals

Others I saw were the J C Chaplins III, Margaret Knapp and her brother E W Knapp, Mrs J B Sellers, Katherine Collin, Margaret Rose, Martha Edmondson and her house guest Helen Henderson of Brookville Pa, the J Henry O'Neills with Mrs O'Neill wearing black crepe with ruffles of the same material suggesting the bustle era.

Mrs George S Baton wore wisteria crepe. The Moorhead B Hollands were there and the Gordon Kings with Mrs King wearing a Persian purple crepe gown with a long sash of cerise crepe falling from the low back decolletage.

Mrs Morgan B Schiller chose a white satin gown. Mrs William Penn Snyder Jr wore dark blue velvet with old lace trimming the short sleeves and Mrs Roberdeau Green Annan chose a black velvet and ermine wrap.

Popular Gay Hues

Thronging the lobby during intermissions were Mrs Reginald Quaile wearing a black velvet gown, Mrs W Terrell Johnson in white crepe; Mrs A P Woolfolk in blue satin; Mrs Blair Childs in turquoise blue velvet with fur banding the short sleeves; Mrs H H McClintic Jr wearing a black and white satin gown, Mrs F G Gwinner III in black lace, Mrs Raymond Ford Moreland, in green crepe, and Frances Forsyth in beige lace with a turquoise blue velvet finger-tip jacket.

Mrs George Burgwin chose black satin; Mrs T Howe Nimick was there; Mrs J Porter Gillespie wearing yellow crepe with a sash of green and blue crepe; Mrs. Felix B Snowdon in black crepe; Mrs J F Walton in blue velvet and beige satin and Mrs George L Craig Jr in black chiffon.

Others there were Mrs Julian Kennedy, Mrs W Barnet Wolfe, Mrs John M Freeman, Mrs Frederick Blackburn, Mrs Samuel Hartwell Jr, Adele Lippincott and Mary Mellon McClung.

Nixon Is Thronged

Among the huge crowd in the foyer at the Nixon was Mrs John W. Ritchie, who wore a striking gown of grey-green satin, with a white bunny jacket, and the James Edward Lewises with Mrs Lewis in a gown of black crepe with a black velvet knee-length wrap furred with white fox. I caught a glimpse of Alice Gundelfinger, too, and I noticed Mrs. William Thaw Jr., as she entered the theater, wearing black crepe with a wrap of black velvet.

The junior William Larimer Mellons were chatting in the foyer, and Mrs Mellon wore a very smart gown of black velvet, having wide, criss-crossed bands of the same material across the low decolletage. Her brief jacket was of ermine. Elizabeth Vermorcken was among the first-nighters, wearing her favorite black, with a black velvet wrap. Frances Fitzgerald was regal in an unusual gown of scintillating white satin, with a wide scarf of deep orange thrown back over the shoulders, forming cape-sleeves. Mrs. James Edmundson, I saw, too, and Mary Kuhn, who wore blue figured crepe with a wrap of black velvet and white fox.

Mrs Ralph W Harbison chose a gown of yellow and black crepe with a finger-tip jacket of black Persian lamb having collar and cuffs of chinchilla fur.

Prominent Folk Seen

During the intermission I noticed the Frank Adair Leovys in the foyer, with Mrs Leovy in black georgette and blue velvet wrap having a collar of white fox. With them was their daughter, Mrs Clarence Stanley, in black velvet.

Mrs Wilmer M Jacoby was charming in beige lace with a wrap of red and gold lame having a wide mink collar. Petite Barbara Ewing, with L. S. Haskins, wore a sweeping gown of wood brown lace, and Virginia Frew Wright chose an ensemble of hunter's green with a derby of the same shade. Mrs Allan Magee Scaife was with Mrs Ellen Stone Bailey, and wore a stunning gown and three-quarter length jacket of deep wine red velvet, and Mrs. Bailey chose black.

Margaret Geddes wore an empire gown of deep coral velvet with black velvet wrap, and Mrs George Kelly III wore blue.

Harriet Ramburg wore black satin as did Genevieve Bell, who wore a wrap of black velvet. Mrs. Dudley Livingstone chose a chic frock of wood brown wool crepe with a jaunty scarf of orange wool.

Dorothy Dunlevy entertained a box party in honor of Frances Henry, whose marriage will be an event of this month. The honor guest was gowned in black lace with a white bunny jacket. The other guests were Dorothy Ryland, Mrs Carl Scott, Mrs Eugene Flannery and Mrs. Henry L. McGraff.

Mrs Bernard Horne chose green crepe and Mrs William D Rodgers black velvet. Mrs Clark Miller wore flowered lame.

Buyers Abuse Privileges In Stores

Pittsburgh retail customers return $15,000,000 worth of purchases every year, Bishop Browne, of the University of Pittsburgh, told the Monday Luncheon Club yesterday at a meeting in McCreery's. Last year, he said, the merchants of the United States handled $500,000,000 worth of returned goods and the cost of that handling was $50,000,000.

Boston, Pittsburgh, Chicago and San Francisco head the list, Mr. Browne stated, saying that some stores have 20 per cent of their stock in transit all the time.

He sketched the background of the returned goods policy, saying that it went back to the time when the manufacturer dictated to the retailer what he should buy and no change has been made since the fashion element entered into buying and the consumer became the dictator.

Today the policy is misunderstood and misinterpreted and many persons who have charge accounts take no thought of their credit privileges, but look upon their accounts merely as something on which to return goods. Putting returned goods into saleable shape again is an item of great expense, he observed.

Hasty buying and high pressure salesmanship were held to be among the chief causes of the evil, to remedy which merchants have even closed charge accounts and have gone so far as to discharge or transfer salespersons whose records show too frequent returns. A nominal charge on returned goods was suggested as a remedial measure also. Mrs. Pauline Merrill introduced Mr. Browne.

Club Notes

A talk by Mrs. John M. Phillips on the clubwomen's new project—furnishing Stone Manse in South Park; a play by the Rosslyn Farms Woman's Club, music by Ethel Vance Conrad and Naomi Earnestine Marxen and an address on "Five Forgotten Words," by the Rev. Dr. J. M. McQuilkin, are the outstanding features for the meeting of the Allegheny County Federation of Women's Clubs to be held October 30. The Woman's Club of Carnegie is the hostess group and will entertain the guests in the First United Presbyterian Church.

* * *

Speakers listed for the season by the Pittsburgh Society, Archaelogical Institute of America, are Sydney P. Noe, the Rev. Joseph M. Waterman, Dr. George E. Mylonas and Gen. Ivor Thord-Gray. Mr. Noe will speak in November on "Greek Coins;" Mr. Waterman in December on "From the Galilee Man to the Man of Galilee." Dr. Mylonas, January's speaker, on "Discoveries at Eleusis," and Gen. Thord-Gray in April. He will give mythological archaeological and historical sketches of the pre-Columbian civilization of the Valley of Mexico.

He was Heyward Shepherd, a watchman employed by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

The local representatives were Mrs. Adolph F. Hofmann, president of the Pittsburgh chapter; Mrs. Leonard Rawsthorne, registrar; Mrs. Robert F. This price . . . $195 . . . is really exceptional. It is made possible because of the foresight of this organization in its purchase of skins, and to lowered costs in manufacturing. There are three very smart models.

- the first, is a slightly fitted model with a face-framing collar, and an effective cuff, reaching the elbow to form an unusual sleeve.
- the second, which is also semi-fitted, with a suggestion of a flare, has a tuxedo-type collar and a pointed cuff sleeve.
- the third has a standing collar which forms a jabot at the right. It has a new full sleeve ending with a tight cuff.

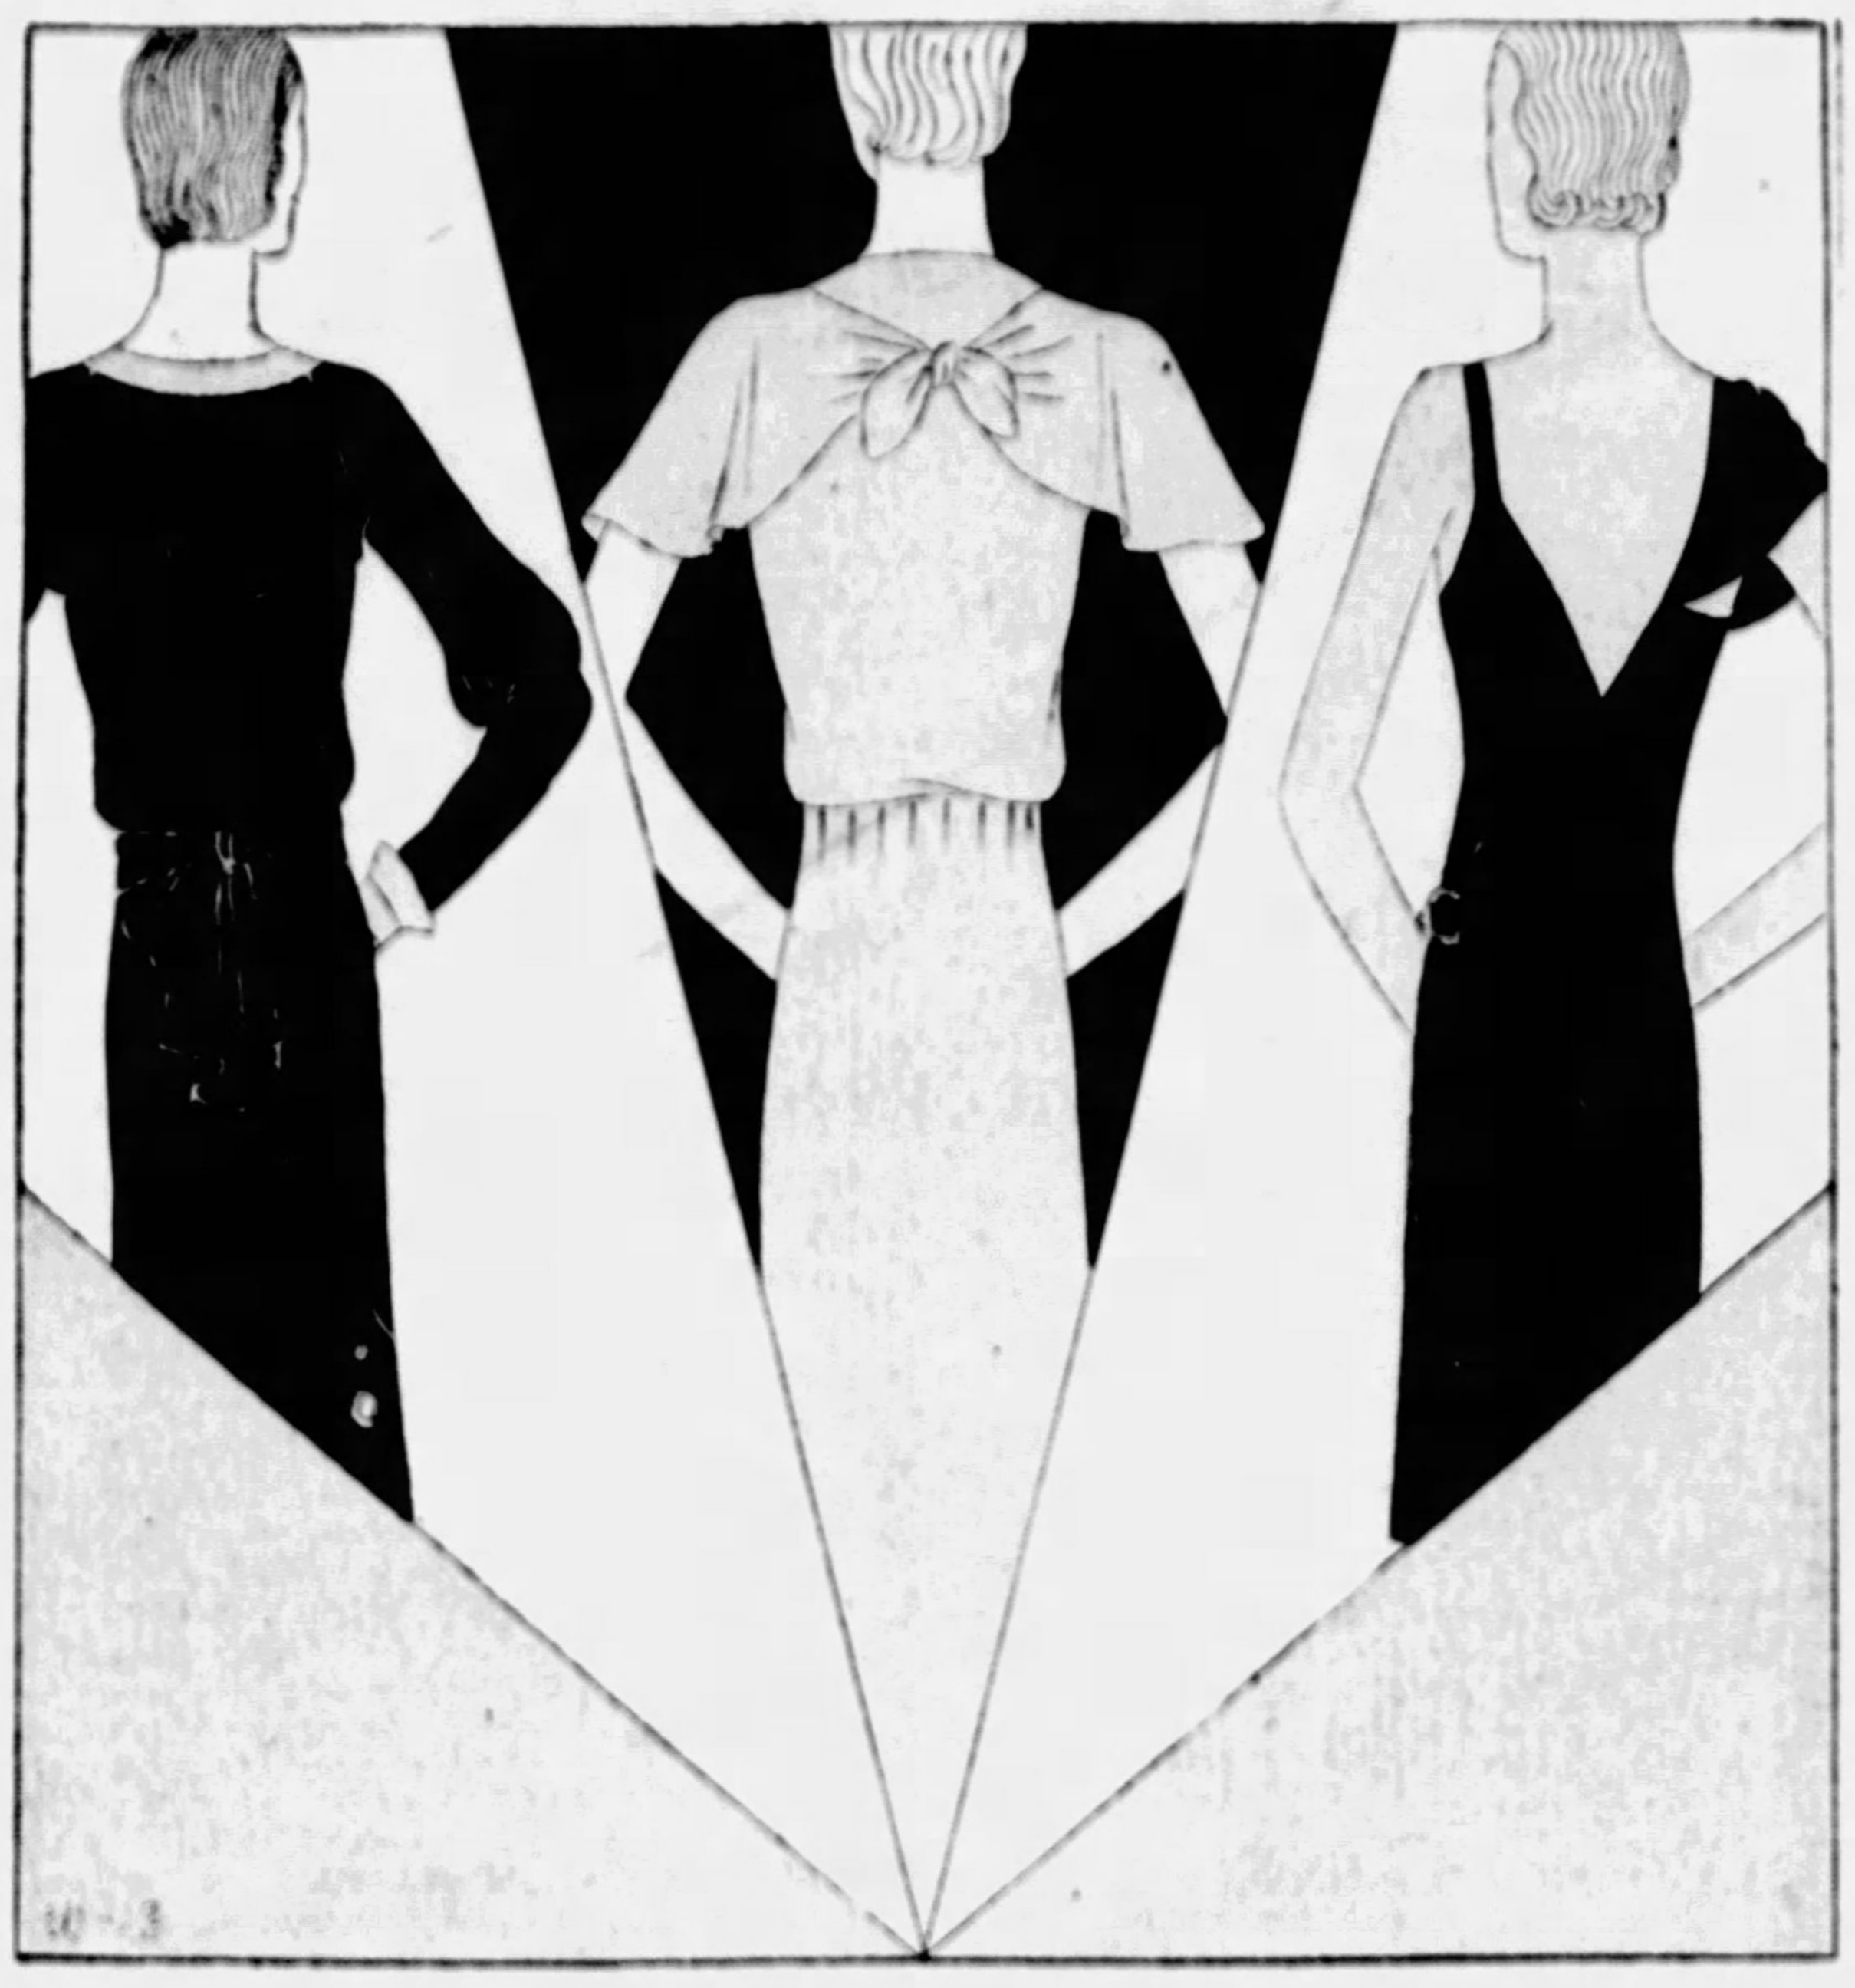
NEWS ABOUT THE BACKS OF LATEST CHARMING FROCKS

Sketched in Paris



Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Oct. 13. — Frocks still continue to talk back to us, since the back continues to draw so much interest and attention. There is scarcely a frock that does not show some ingenuous detail centered at the rear of the design. All sorts of sleeve details, shoulder lines and bustle effects are included in the new designs and really many frocks should be sketched from the back as well as from the front, so different is the view on each side. This totally different aspect is most refreshing and makes for greater individuality and ingenuity on a frock. And so every house is using clever back details as a trademark for its designs. On daytime frocks, yokes, apron effects, bows and shoulder yokes and capelets are used for the back of the gown. While for evening, all sorts of straps, decolletages and bustle effects serve to make an evening frocks a real two-faced affair.

NOW FOR some back news. First is the back of a Bruyere model with two semi-detached capelets, a puffed sleeve and set-in apron tied in back in a bow-knot. The material is black crepe, the details are in lemon yellow crepe. The right-hand sketch shows the back of a Lenief model. The one-sided shoulder line and surplice back are interesting details. There is a jewelled clasp at the left hip. The middle sketch shows the back of a simple afternoon frock of Jenny with yokes at the back of the shoulder.

As a result, SUNSWEETS are gently laxative. They stimulate sluggish elimination in a natural and wholesome way. End sluggish elimination and you end a world of troubles.

SUNSWEETS are true tree-ripened prunes. They are never picked or knocked from the trees. They hang in the sunshine until so heavy with natural fruit sugar they drop of their own weight. The last few days on the trees mean everything to prunes.

FONSECA NINTH PILOT IN 13 YEARS

C. A. Comiskey

WHEN DONIE BUSH worked overtime to get Lew Fonseca from Cleveland and finally landed him last May by giving Willie Kamm to the Indians in exchange for him, he didn't dream that he would see his own job as manager of the White Sox being turned over to Fonseca five months later. Now Fonseca, in turn, faces a future about which there is the same lack of assurance. Managing a club for the veteran owner, Charles A. Comiskey, is about the most uncertain post in the upper division of baseball.

How quickly they come and go as directing heads of the Pale Hose on the playing field may be judged from the fact the appointment of Fonseca makes no fewer than nine managers the club has had in a period of only 13 years. Prior to that time the Sox had only six pilots in 18 seasons, with Jimmy Callahan serving two engagements, the others being Clark Griffith, Fielder Jones, Billy Sullivan, Hugh Duffy and Clarence Rowland, but since the latter part of Rowland's regime the life of a Comiskey skipper usually has been short.

FOLLOWING ROWLAND'S LAST season in 1918, Kid Gleason served from the Black Sox campaign of 1919 through to the end of 1923, but no other leader has lasted three years. Frank Chance was appointed for 1924 but illness prevented him from starting the season and Johnny Evers was appointed in his place. Evers was dismissed after one campaign and his successor in 1925 was Eddie Collins, who was deposed while the race of 1927 was under way.

Ray Schalk supplanted Collins, but, like his predecessor, was dropped in the middle of a season, giving way to Lena Blackburne during the [illegible] fight of 1928. Blackburne was let go in favor of Bush after the season of 1929, and now Bush steps aside for Fonseca. It's an endless parade. Comiskey himself appears to be about the only man connected with the outfit who can feel reasonably sure of his place.

SOME INFLUENCES IN the official family of the Sox owner are said to make the lot of a manager anything but a happy one by refusing to confine their attention to the business affairs of the club. As in Bush's case the harried pilot often is glad to get out. Even the trouble between Lena Blackburne and Art Shires is reported to have originated from that source.

Illness, broken bones and what not have made Fonseca one of the most unfortunate players in baseball and if Gleason, Evers, Collins, Schalk, Blackburne and Bush were to speak their minds, they'd probably express the opinion that Lew's appointment to manage the Sox is an indication that his luck hasn't changed.

PEPPER MARTIN'S disclosure last week, in a jocular offer to swap salaries with Judge Landis, that his stipend for the regular season had been only $4,500, brought out that the most sensational player in the world series, was, with the possible exception of Dib Williams, the one drawing the smallest pay. Martin's $4,500 was in sharp contrast to the $20,000 or more pulled down annually by Grove, Simmons, Earnshaw, Grimes and Cochrane. But unless ball players have altered their ways, 1932 probably will be slightly different. As one critic reported, Sam Breadon, Card owner, was cheering as loudly as anybody else for Martin, but was cheering with tears in his eyes when he thought of how much he would have to pay the young man next year.

John McGraw

JOHN McGRAW expresses the views of many baseball followers in protesting that the world series was started too late. "The first game should have been played on Tuesday, September 29, instead of on Thursday, October 7," he said. "There was no sound reason for the delay.

"The Athletics and Cardinals were on edge when the pennant races ended officially, yet they wasted three days before getting under way. It is a great mistake to prolong the world series so that it conflicts with the college football season. Baseball starts with the training campaign late in February and holds the attention of the public long enough without carrying the game well into October."

HOW MUCH IS a world series worth to a city, apart from the international advertising it brings? More than $2,000,000 was spent in St. Louis during the recent classic, according to home Chamber of Commerce.

It is estimated that 30,000 persons from out of town spent $1,500,000 during the four games, and that the average expenditures were slightly more than $12 a day per person. The additional $500,000 was spent, the Chamber estimates, by St. Louis residents in the way of entertainment of out-of-town guests and in "beautifying the town."

OLD TEX MOSSE, once with the D. C. & A. C. pro team here and coach of Pitt (then W. U. P.) in 1904-05, has bobbed up out on the Pacific Coast with a request that the guards of the old days be given a break. He takes exception to some writer's remark that they were dumb, and declares that on the contrary they were smarter than the average run of guard today, as witness Heffelfinger, Hare, McCracken, Woodruff, Wharton, Pierce and countless others. Mosse adds that there's nothing new about the running guard, and that the latter came into being as far back as 1891.

"THE FACTS OF the case are that football in the old days was to a great extent built up around the guard position," Tex says. "Not counting the guards-back play, with which George Woodruff beat all comers when he was coaching at Penn, the guards in those days led the interference even more than they do now.

"Then the two guards came out of the line at the same time and successfully helped to bowl over the tacklers on an end run. Of course, in the guards-back attack the guards led in every play and did most of the ball carrying. Also, when the guards did not stand back of the line on that play they were called upon to carry the ball through the opposite side of the line and around the ends, too. It is possible that in this day there would not be so many worn out halfbacks if the linemen were used more to carry the ball."

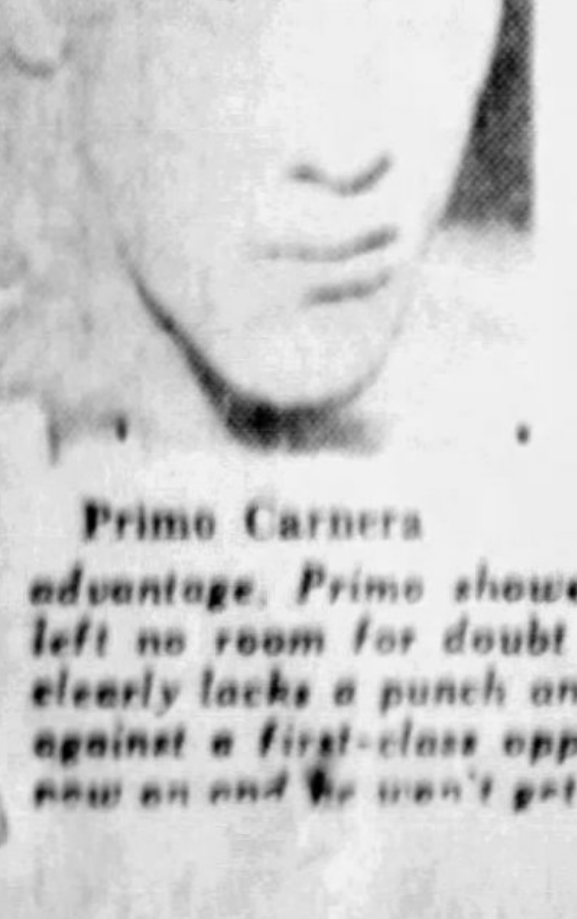
THE FAILURE OF Penn to show to advantage against Franklin and Marshall last Saturday may have been due partly to the fact that during the week the Quakers were deprived of the line-coaching services of Alec Fox, former Pitt guard and captain.

Fox was laid up at Paul Scull's home in Cynwyd with an attack of grip. Local friends have been advised that he is recovering and soon will be back on the job.



Primo Carnera

GOING CONTRARY TO the dope, as usual, Jack Sharkey fought one of his real fights last night when reported to have gone back 50 per cent and the result was a pile of evidence that Primo Carnera isn't constructed of championship stuff. Though he escaped a knockout, after getting away with a count in the fourth round that was longer than Gene Tunney's, Carnera was on the verge of one in each of half a dozen frames toward the finish, took a terrific beating and was clearly no match for the one-time sailor, in spite of 60 pounds advantage. Primo showed surprising boxing skill and speed, and left no room for doubt about his gameness and stamina, but he clearly lacks a punch and is no longer to be considered dangerous against a first-class opponent. He won't be feared so much from now on and he won't get over that beating in a hurry.

CONNIE TO KEEP PRESENT A'S TEAM INTACT

By CONNIE MACK

Manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, Winners of Nine Pennants

Connie Mack

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 13.—As early as last June, when the Athletics were in the lead, newspaper articles appeared all over the country to the effect that at the end of the season I would break up my team.

Baseball writers put the question to me in every city I visited, but I would never answer their question and decided to let them do the guessing. The pennant season and world series having ended, there is no reason why I shouldn't address myself to the subject now.

No, emphatically no! I am not going to dismember the gallant team that won me three straight American League pennants. I suppose the idea that caused these foolish stories to be printed in cold type was based on an act of mine at the end of the season of 1914 when I started disposing of some of my best players.

In the minds of some unthinking persons, my policy in baseball is to form a championship machine, and then smash it. Well, that's wrong.

We won pennants in 1910, 1911, 1913 and 1914. And I did break up that team, but there were especial reasons for it.

In 1914 a World War started, and there was also a baseball war when the Federal League entered the field to compete with the two majors.

CLUB IN RUT

To hold our players, salaries rocketed. I soon found that I was paying more money to our players than was coming in at the gate, and with the great upheaval in Europe, that embroiled the leading nations, the outlook was bad.

In those days at Shibe Park we had numerous 25 and 50-cent seats, and we were not making expenses. Players were constantly crying for more money and many of them told me that they would have to get further raises for the season of 1915.

I saw they were in no mood to listen to reason, and their only answer, when I tried to explain the financial condition of our club, was that the Federal League was offering bigger inducements, and that they would go where the money was.

In desperation, I had to lighten the load, for I felt that the season of 1915 was going to be a poor one, with Europe on fire and general conditions bad.

So I sold Eddie Collins, my best player, to the White Sox and disposed of other valuable men. Yet it did not take me long to regret my action, and I soon wished that I had hit on some other plan to have retained the best of my players and at least have kept out of last place in the seven seasons that followed 1914.

PROBLEM SERIOUS

Even today we have serious financial problems and I don't see how we can continue to pay the salaries we do unless our attendance improves.

It has never been our policy to attempt to club the public into patronizing us. We have never put on any side shows to attract a crowd. Our idea is to give our patrons the best baseball that is possible, and if they don't patronize us on that basis, there is nothing further for us to do.

I am not complaining. Philadelphia fans pay as high an admission average as is received in other leading cities. While we have won three straight pennants, nevertheless, the Athletic club has not made any big money. In fact, if we did not get in the world series, we would have to struggle to keep our heads above water.

Even before the depression hit the country, we did not get anywhere financially.

Our worst handicap is the fact that we are the only American League team denied Sunday baseball at home. Anybody knowing anything about baseball realizes what a hardship this is.

FULTON, Mo., Oct. 13.—Paul Derringer, who pitched two games for the St. Louis Cardinals in the recent world series, received serious cuts and bruises near here yesterday when his automobile was sideswiped by another.

Derringer received a deep cut over one eye, a badly bruised nose, light scalp injuries and a wrenched back. After receiving treatment from a local physician the trip was continued.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: COLUMBUS WAS THE FIRST IMMIGRANT TO BE DEPORTED—On March 21, 1499, a decree was issued empowering the commander of Calatrava, Francisco de Bobadilla, to proceed to Santo Domingo and to try Columbus on a charge of venality, excessive cruelty to natives and aspiration to a royal rank. Bobadilla sailed in August, 1500, and arrived in Haiti in October. Columbus was immediately summoned to a trial by the king's envoy and found guilty. He was sentenced to be deported in chains to Spain, the loss of all rights and privileges, and a writ of prohibition to ever set foot again on the soil of the New World was issued against him. He was forthwith deported on the caravel "La Goda." This was the first sentence of deportation issued in the Americas, and it is curious that its victim and first deportee should have been the man credited with the discovery of America.

Barleycorn Wins, Gains Hold On Greensburg Hunts Cup

By JESS CARVER,

Staff Correspondent.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Oct. 13.—Red Fire, veteran hunter, by Book out of F. Sharpe, owned by Mrs. George R. McNary and capably ridden by George McCook, made a game but unavailing bid to capture her third Western Pennsylvania Hunts steeplechase victory and permanent possession of the Hunts Cup yesterday afternoon over the grueling three and one-half mile Huntlands course, but after pounding along neck and neck with the leaders for half the distance, faltered and finished out of the money. As a result, Barleycorn, entered by T. W. Durant, New York sportsman, gained a hold on the coveted trophy. The triumph was the third of the day for the New York exhibitor.

Red Fire gained a leg on the cup first back in 1926 and repeated in 1927. In 1928, however, H. K. Binn's Santley galloped past the judges' brake first and in '29, James Hamilton's Merry Widow was first across. Last year, Mrs. James Hamilton's Dram Buie scored.

COURSE IS FAST

Pittsburgh, Sewickley, Beaver Valley and Westmoreland County society turned out in brave array for the annual meeting of the Westmoreland Hunt. Perfect racing weather, and a fast course put the finishing touches to an ideal setting. A crowd of 2,500 was on hand.

A field of 11 starters were sent away in ship-shape fashion and with dispatch by Starter, Dave McDonald. Passing the judges' brake the first time, Richard K. Mellon's Comea led, with Barleycorn second and John W. Lawrence's Bandmaster third. O. C. Hutchinson and Emerald Isle III refused early jumps and galloped by riderless.

The field was pretty well settled as it swept past the second time. Barleycorn had established a lead with Red Fire making a game challenge, closely pressed by Comea and Mrs. A. W. Wadsworth's Hotspur, the pre-race favorite, and Bandmaster. The last three furlongs took its toll, and, fighting off the last minute bid of Comea, the big Durant gelding swept across the line. Comea saved second from the fast closing Bandmaster and Mrs. Ralph Lynch's Remus finally galloped home fourth. The time was 7:54. White gave Barleycorn a fine ride, and deserves all the more credit when it is taken into consideration that he was ill when he dismounted from the winner of the fourth event.

Beside the first four finishers, the following horses started: Mrs. F. M. Gould's Wise Guy; William M. Buckley's O. C. Hutchinson; Mrs. E. L. Woodward's Emerald Isle III; Harry Kirkover's Sunset; Mrs. McNary's Red Fire; W. W. Lanahan's Sleeve Luni and the favorite, Hotspur.

DURANT SUCCESSFULL

All in all it was a right successful day for the Durant horses and for the strong-handed Charley White, a brother of Mrs. George Burgwin, of Pittsburgh. White hails from Baltimore. He had a leg up on Watsonia, a brown gelding out of Donna Cona by Eunicek, in the first event, a two-mile steeplechase. The Fox Chapel Stud entry, Fichet, with George McCook up, led at the end of the first mile after breaking to a fine start, but Watsonia pounded into

ENGINEERS SET FOR TOURNEY

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

Engineering Society will stage their annual golf tourney over the links of the St. Clair Country Tomorrow, the Illuminating Club, beginning after the noon hour. Special buses will leave the William Penn Hotel at 11:30 a. m. for the club, where luncheon will be served prior to the golf.

The scheduled Sunday sweepstakes at the North Park county links were held over until next Sunday, due to inclement weather.

Yesterday, the Hotel, Club and Restaurant Men's Golf Association held their final golf tourney and dinner at the Stanton Heights Golf Club. Walter H. Mennigke, president, and John J. Dillon, vice president, were in charge of affairs.

Fairmount Rejects Entry of Mad Play

COLLINSVILLE, Ill., Oct. 13.—(AP.)— Mad Play, famous race horse of other years, will run in no more cheap plater races, at least at Fairmount Park.

The entry clerk today had this ruling from the stewards:

"Reject entry of Mad Play for future races."

It was reported at the track today that the present owners plan to turn Mad Play out to pasture.

KOMONEN RACE VICTOR

PORT JERVIS, N. Y., Oct. 13.—(INS.)— David Komonen, of the Monarch A. C., Toronto, Canada, won the Columbus Day marathon yesterday, having completed the course of 26.2 miles in 2 hours 39.27 minutes. James P. Henigan, of the Medford A. C., Medford, Mass., was second, time 2:45.05, and Albert (Whitey) Michelson, of the Melrose A. C., New York, running unattached, was third. Time, 2:46.29.

Sharkey Has Carnera Near Kayo in Comeback Win

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—(INS.)—Jack Sharkey today basks again in the sunshine of certain popularity because of his one sided victory over Primo Carnera in their 15 round fight before 30,000 chilled spectators at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, last night. The receipts were $129,325.82.

Sharkey fought in the way he really can fight when the mood is upon him and the sometimes erratic, sometimes brilliant Bostonian glittered in his outing last night against the gigantic alien.

But in defeat, the Italian was not disgraced. He showed almost unbelievable ability to soak up punishment. He demonstrated courage of fearless kind and, even though he was hit hard enough and often enough to fell a dozen oxen, he went down only once.

Sharkey today continued to insist that Carnera actually went down twice from one volley of punches and held to the opinion he should have been declared a knockout victor then and there.

PRIMO DOWN TWICE

He ripped a left into Carnera's body in that fourth, followed with two mighty heaves to the chin. Primo went down in sections, a foot or two at a time. He made an effort to get up at four, and seemed to have made the grade. Then he toppled back, but was soon back in fighting position again.

Right then Sharkey put on one of the acts that are typically Sharkeyish and nearly cost him the decision. He rushed to Referee Gunboat Smith and demanded the decision, claiming that when Carnera swooned to the landscape the second time he was automatically a loser.

Smith ignored his demands, and then Sharkey made a wild rush toward his corner and was halfway out of the ring when his manager, Johnny Buckley, tossed him back.

Sharkey, suddenly realizing the error of his wild act, resumed fighting.

"I don't see how Schmeling can duck me now," said Sharkey today. "I proved by beating Carnera that I'm entitled to another crack at the German. As far as Carnera is concerned, I'll gladly say this: He can take more punishment than any human I've ever met. He is game to the core. He is tough—tough—and tougher than concrete."

ITALIAN WEAKENS

At the end of the eighth, Sharkey had a slight margin, but it was still anybody's fight. But soon the Italian, who had shown surprising form in the early rounds, began to weaken from Sharkey's unerring left hand to the body and Sharkey found it easier and still easier to slam the chin and body targets presented by a somewhat floundering Carnera.

Sharkey eased up in the thirteenth, conserving energy for a rally.

He kept stabbing his left into the Italian's amidships section in the fourteenth and opened up the fifteenth with a savage and relentless attack that sent Carnera staggering from one side of the ring to the other.

After every punch it seemed that Carnera could endure no more, but he weathered the blizzard of leather and was on his feet at the end, bloody, weary and shaky.

BUTCH FORCING FIGHT AT GARDEN

MOSE BUTCH — JOHNNY DATTO — REFEREE RED ROBINSON

Typical close-range milling that marked windup battle at Motor Square Garden last night, with Butch the aggressor and winning the referee's decision. Datto, weakened by weight-making, failed to put up his usual sharp-hitting battle against the local southpaw.

ENS' JOB STILL OPEN FIGHT

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The Pirate managerial situation today developed into a big free-for-all shindig. May the best man win.

Joe Schultz

Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the local club of the National League, admitted this morning that George Gibson does not have the "inside track."

"The managerial post is entirely open—neither George Gibson nor any other person has been decided upon as the new leader of the club," said the Pittsburgh magnate when pressed for a statement by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

"I have many applications for the post on file," continued Dreyfuss. "It is altogether likely that we will take plenty of time in making a selection, as the matter is one of much importance. But you may be assured that the job has not been given to anybody."

Dreyfuss intimated quite clearly that the next manager of the club would be an athlete of considerable dash. Apparently he intends to scour the field of prospective pilots before he reaches a decision.

Dash, by the way, is a fine thing in a manager, but base hits are of more importance. Jewel Ens had a lot of dash, but his players could not co-operate with him at the old home plate.

The name of one of Pittsburgh's athletic sons has crept into the picture. The possible candidate is Joe Schultz, a South Hills boy, who has made his mark in the baseball world both as a player and a manager. Joe has just piloted the Houston club to a Texas League pennant. And in doing this Schultz made a lot of money for his employers, who are none other than the owners of the St. Louis Cardinals, new champions of the world.

Joe attended the world series games in St. Louis, where he was sounded in the matter. Apparently he has made no application to be Jewel Ens' successor, but if the job were offered him he might be willing to have the Cardinals' strings unloosed. At least he may be considered as a candidate.

Dreyfuss did not divulge the names of any of the applicants, but there was note to his words indicating he will consider the various contenders from many sources. It should be interesting to watch the developments in this big issue.

Mellon's Coq D'Or was second, passing Fichet in the stretch, and Charley Mack, owned by J. North Fletcher, was fourth. Fordham, a big black gelding, entered by Mrs. Francis Burke Rodgers and ridden by James C. Hamilton, refused the first jump and threw his rider, who was uninjured.

Jimmy Byrne vs. Frank Sawyer, 10 rounds, Portland, Ore.

News from New Castle that I. D. (Apples) Meyers, Pittsburgh boxing promoter, has taken a lease on the Castle Bowl, formerly the Jolly Bowl, there, effective November 1, does not come as a surprise.

Apples always has had a warm spot in his heart for the Castle Bowl. It was while attending fights there during its first season, several years ago, that he conceived the idea of building the Meyers Bowl in North Braddock, giving the Pittsburgh district its largest outdoor boxing arena. Recently, he entered into negotiations to take over the New Castle arena and all of the details finally have been worked out. The place is entirely covered and enclosed and equipped with a heating system for winter, and Apples feels he can put it on a paying basis again running two shows a month.

It is likely that Meyers also will resume operations at the Moose Temple, downtown, shortly, moving back and forth between the two cities to arrange and stage his cards.

Between Rounds

Sammy Paris, Hill bantamweight, back from Cleveland to rest up a cut eye, wants to box Jimmy Thomas or Jackie Wilson. He had four bouts while away, losing only the last one on a technical knockout to Joey Kushner when his eye was slashed, and he is rematched with Kushner for November 2.

Willie Davies, of Charleroi, boxes Ross Fields, of Weirton, W. Va., again in a six-round bout in Cleveland Friday night. Tug Phillips, former local boxer, meets Morrie Sherman, Michigan welterweight champion, in Detroit tomorrow night. Phillips stopped Sherman in eight rounds a year ago.

Frank Novak and Chuck Taggart have received the purses for their recent bout at the Meyers Bowl, held up when the referee disqualified Novak for hitting after the bell in the fifth round. Novak will box Sam Cohen, of Cleveland, on an early card at Motor Square Garden.

Frankie Bojarski, Jack Barry's southpaw lightweight sensation, of Erie, makes his debut in Buffalo Friday night against Joe Marciente. Tommy Paul boxes Andy Martin in the main bout of this show, with Lou Petrone and Steve Halaiko in another 10-rounder.

Reed Brown will be the manager of Lou Saunders, of Beaver Falls, just returned home from fighting around the country with battles against Honey Boy Finnegan, Buster Brown and other notables in his record. Lou can make 130 pounds and would like to fight Frankie Bojarski. Another boxer who wants to take on Bojarski is Phil Zwick, of Cleveland.

Tony Herrera meets Harry Carlton, of Jersey City, in one of three 10-round bouts in Madison Square Garden, New York, Friday night. Billy Townsend and Paulie Walker are in the main event and Vince Dundee and Solly Krieger in another 10-round feature.

Gene Stanton, Cleveland heavyweight, boxes Dick (Tiny) Powell, of Akron, in the main bout at Wheeling next Monday night.

BUTCH DEFEATS JOHNNY DATTO IN TAME GO

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor

A below-par Johnny Datto, weakened by strenuous weight-making a few hours before scaling time in the afternoon, last night lost a drab and featureless battle to Mose Butch, local southpaw, in the main event at Motor Square Garden before a fair-sized crowd.

Butch forced the fighting and won seven of the 10 rounds, but one of the judges, Frank Ferris, voted for a draw, and the result, therefore, goes into the records as a referee's decision.

Butch apparently injured his left hand midway in the battle and also became arm-weary and leg-weary toward the finish and they wound up mixing in a mauling fashion.

DATTO DRAWN BY WEIGHT

It was said Datto weighed more than 128 pounds when he arrived in town on Sunday and the articles called for 122, give or take a pound. He finally made the grade at 3 o'clock yesterday, coming in at 122½ and then tried to put back on some of the strength he had dissipated to save his forfeit. The Filipino was drawn and listless in the ring and wasted many moments in stalling. His punches lacked their usual steam, both to the head and body, and, while he rocked Butch off balance a few times in the early stages, he did no real damage aside from bloodying the latter's nose.

On the whole, it was a disappointing mess, with Butch giving his best, but Datto once more failing to measure up in a local bout, this time because he was not physically fit. Butch made 122 pounds handily.

SPIEGEL LACES HOLT

The best fight of the night was the eight-round semi-final, in which Joey Spiegel of Uniontown, another southpaw, smacked Billy Holt, hard-hitting Negro welterweight, of Homewood, all over the ring and just missed knocking him out in the last round, when Billy had to hold onto the ropes and cover to keep his feet under volleys of lefts to the head. It was the best fight Spiegel has turned in so far as a pro and he looks as if he is going somewhere. He outgeneraled Holt throughout and paced himself like a veteran. He scaled 141 against 143 for holt.

Joey Bazzone, of McKeesport, 139, outslugged Muscle Scholes, of the North Side, 134, in the six-round second bout, but Judge Deeson and Referee Red Robinson didn't think so and discounted Judge Ferris' vote in his favor, with the result that Scholes was declared the winner.

RODGERS-PAUL NEXT

Referee Eddie Kennedy stopped the opening bout to save Bobby Rowe, East End Negro southpaw, 120¾, after Petey Johns, of the North Side, eleventh-hour substitute for Teddy Mancuso, of Connellsville, had floored him three times in the third round, the first time for nine and the second time for eight. Johns is a son of the oldtime local baseball player of the same name.

It was announced that Tommy Paul, of Buffalo, and Jackie Rodgers will box the main bout at the Garden next Monday night, but just how this can be arranged with Paul boxing Andy Martin in a main bout in Buffalo three nights before is a problem that will have to be worked out, the Commission rule calling for a lapse of five days between battles for main-bout principals.

George Chip, former middleweight champion, was introduced from the ring while Frank Klaus, from whom he won the title, was acting as a second in Butch's corner before the main bout.

Carnegie Tech has been given a two-day rest after its victory over Georgia Tech Saturday. The players will not be summoned to practice again until tomorrow afternoon, but from that time on they must dig in to get ready for the first visit of the Purdue Boilermakers to Western Pennsylvania, which is to take place on October 24.

CHAPTER TWO

Most fellows aiming to be baseball players get their minds set pretty early as to what they want to be. Pretty nearly everybody wants to be a pitcher because the pitcher gets his name in the papers plenty and until Babe Ruth and these other boys began knocking down fences and becoming drawing crowds the pitchers got the most money. But I was different. I just couldn't make up my mind, and so I played every position in baseball and kept on doing that until I went to Houston in 1927 and Joe Mathis, the manager, said to me:

"You're going to stop jumping around one place to another and settle right down to being an outfielder, so quit monkeying."

I heard later that Branch Rickey told Joe that if I ever was going to get anywhere it would be as an outfielder and Joe took the cue from him, but I know that Joe is the man that finally put me in the outfield and hung an anchor on me.

EARLY BASEBALL JOBS

In 1922, when I was 18, the Brooks hardware people offered me a chance to get on their team and I grabbed that job, but there wasn't any pay to it. I pitched for them, played infield places and also in the outfield. Later on, I heard that the Kelly Jewelry team, of Oklahoma City, was going on a tour and needed a player. I was all for making that trip and was recommended to them. It was tough getting the place, though, because they thought I was too young, and I wasn't so big, either. But they finally said "yes." We went on a trip through the state.

We got back in time to get into the series for the city championship.

We lost out in the third round of the tournament. I did a little of everything in that series. I made three errors in seven chances in the infield and five hits in eight times up.

I pitched one of the games. That is, I mean I started one of them. They blew me off the mound in a hurry. I finished up that year playing with the Oklahoma National Guard team, which had games scheduled after the season had ended for the Kelly club.

TOO ANXIOUS IN FIELD

In 1923 I got myself a job with the Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company. I was the "grunt man." That means I worked on the ground and held up fellows that had to be lifted up to do some work. I tell you, you grunt. The O. G. and E. had a ball club and they made me a member. With them it was the same story. I was always trying too hard to make good and not doing so well.

I'd be so anxious to make putouts that no matter where I'd be playing I'd go running after the ball. Just not much good sense. If a hit was made to right and I was at second or short, I'd be out in that field trying to make the catch. I had enough speed to get into the outfield lots of times before the ball came down. Those players would pan me plenty for trying to patrol their beats and tangling up with them some times. But I just couldn't get over that habit. Any time I'd see one of the other guys hitting a ball I'd get the fool notion that I was the man that had to make the play on it, and I'd be on my way after that ball.

IN TOILS OF LAW

During 1923, while I was with O. G. and E., we had that bad flood down in Oklahoma City which washed away the Western League ball park. My boss on the O. G. and E. sent a boat out there and told me to guard it because some emergency might arise where we might need it to go places and make repairs. While I was guarding the boat, a policeman came along and tried to rush off with it. He seemed to want it for emergency police work.

The O. G. and E. had told me to protect that boat, and that's what I meant to do. So I grabbed it back. The cop grabbed and I grabbed, and we were scuffling around plenty. But it didn't last an awful long time. The law was against me and so was the cop's club, and I landed in jail charged with being too rough. The O. G. and E. people explained everything the next day and that saved me.

I'm old enough now to know that you have to convince yourself that you're good enough to advance before you can advance, but that is something I didn't know years ago. I just didn't have the "push." Friends really got me those jobs with the Kelly, Brooks, National Guard and O. G. and E. clubs. Harold Lee, whom I always call Burr and who is 13 years older than I am, has been my pal since I was 18, and he always put in a good word for me that got me places on teams.

STARTED—AT LAST—AS PRO

Along in March, 1924, I met with Cliff Campbell, who also was my friend, and, of course, I got right down to talking baseball with him. I never did talk anything much except baseball. I kept saying to Cliff that I wished I could get on a real professional club, and Cliff said:

"Trouble with you is that you are a better player than you think you are. But you're afraid to go around and ask for a job. So I'll do the asking for you. After that you do the playing and if you don't play as well as I'll tell this fellow you can play I'll rattle your ears right off your head."

Later on, Cliff rounded me up and said:

"I've got a job for you with Guthrie and your pay is to be $125 a month and you'll play anywhere they tell you."

So, in the spring of 1924, I reported to Manager M. H. Robertson at Guthrie, in the Oklahoma State League, and my professional career was started with me as a pitcher.

D. & E., W. VA. GAME LOOMS

ELKINS, W. Va., Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Davis and Elkins College today agreed to meet West Virginia University in a post-season charity game proposed by the West Virginia division of the Salvation Army.

Jennings Randolph, D. & E. athletic director, sent a telegram to Maj. J. M. Chamberlain, of the Salvation Army, stating that Davis-Elkins would be pleased to play the suggested charity football game against West Virginia University.

No information was available here concerning the university's attitude toward a charity game. The institutions severed athletic relations two years ago.

In accepting the proposal, Davis-Elkins agreed to play at Morgantown.

W. VA. AWAITS BID

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Harry A. Stansbury, director of athletics at West Virginia University, today said he had received no formal invitation for the university football team to engage in a charity game. He said the university athletic officials would make no announcement until such invitations had been received.

NOTICE, WEST VIEW

Manager Paul Muzzio, of the West View club, has called a special practice session for the club this evening at 7:30. It is important that all of the players be on hand. The club plays Burns at New Kensington tomorrow night.

KARCIS, FORMER TECH ACE, HAS BROKEN LEG

By TOM BIRKS

Sandlot followers are going to see several interesting games this week in the West Penn Independent Conference. Tomorrow evening Dan Burns and West View tangle at Parnassus High School field in a meeting between old rivals.

On Sunday, East Liverpool will get the supreme test when it clashes with the J. P. Rooneys, at the Bridgeville Speedway. The big non-conference tilt of the day will find the Akron Awnings opposed to the McKeesport Olympics, at Olympic Park.

Last Sunday's games took a heavy toll. Johnny Karcis came out of the Rooney-West View game with a broken leg. At McKeesport Patsy Kaletz, a sweet lineman, suffered a broken finger.

Arrangements for a game at Forbes Field on the night of Friday, November 13, between the J. P. Rooneys and the New York Giants, of the National Professional League, are pending. Art Rooney, now in the East, hopes to conclude plans for the game before returning home.

The Burns club has announced that the West View game will start at 8:15 p. m. Local fans have been trailing to the Aluminum town around 8:30, but the officials running the game have been ordered to begin at 8:15.

General List Drifts Lower As Enthusiasm Wanes: Call Money at 2 Per Cent

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Share prices drifted quietly lower today, as last week's buying enthusiasm appeared to have subsided somewhat over the holiday week-end.

Developments in political affairs in England and Germany, and last week's premature expectations of a week-end announcement of the Interstate Commerce Commission's decision on the petition for a 15 per cent increase in freight rates left Wall street somewhat sobered.

Rails were the heaviest group in shares, declines of 3 to 5 points appearing in New York Central, New Haven, Baltimore and Ohio, Santa Fe and Union Pacific. Losses of 2 to more than 3 points appeared in such issues as American Telephone, General Electric, United States Steel, American Can, Consolidated Gas, Eastman, Woolworth, Corn Products, Borden, American Tobacco B, Allied Chemical, du Pont and Westinghouse. Losses of a point or more appeared throughout the list. Stock was not offered in large volume, however, and sales were regarded as profit taking on last week's sweeping advance.

The firmer money market which has followed last week's increase in the New York rediscount rate was reflected in a sag in the high grade, low yield bonds which normally respond to changes in trends in the money market. Call loans renewed at 2 per cent for the first time since April after rising from 1½ per cent to 2 during Friday's session. Bankers' acceptance rates were again advanced.

LOAN RENEWAL RATE UP

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Call money renewed at 2 per cent on the New York Stock Exchange today for the first time since April 7, this year.

The higher renewal rate followed an advance in the rate to 2 per cent Friday, after call money had renewed at 1½ per cent, and reflects the increase in the New York Federal Reserve rediscount rate to 2½ per cent from 1½ per cent last Thursday.

Bankers' acceptances rates were advanced today for the third time since Friday. Today's rise amounted to one-quarter of 1 per cent for all maturities.

The new rates are 2⅜ per cent bid, 2¼ per cent asked, on 30, 60 and 90-day maturities, the rates for four months bills are at 2⅝ per cent bid, 2½ per cent asked, and for five and 6 months maturities, 3 per cent bid and 2⅞ per cent asked.

An increase of one-quarter of 1 per cent was made on Saturday and increases ranging from one-half to three-quarters of 1 per cent were announced the preceding day.

Rail Chief Favors Wage Reductions

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 13.—At the annual meeting today of the Southern Railway, President Fairfax Harrison declared the time has come when railroad wages must be reduced.

"In fairness to the public and stockholders, railroad labor should make the same contribution as the officers of the Southern Railway have," he said. "If organized labor would accept a reduction equivalent to that taken by officers of the company the road would still be in an uncomfortable position, but very much better off than it is today," he stated.

Florida Citrus Fruit Crop Placed Lower

ORLANDO, Fla., Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Florida's citrus fruit crop this season was estimated at 28,500,000 boxes in a federal government report made public today.

Last season's crop was around 35,000,000 boxes, of which 19,000,000 were oranges and 16,000,000 were grapefruit. This year's estimate placed the orange and tangerine production at about 16,500,000 boxes and grapefruit at 12,000,000 boxes.

Standard Lines' Oil Delivery Off

Crude oil deliveries in September by 11 pipe line companies forming the old Standard Oil group, totaled 13,113,367 barrels, comparing with 13,350,620 barrels in August. Deliveries for the first nine months of 1931 totaled 102,577,670 barrels against 135,544,565 barrels in the like 1930 period.

New York Central Drops Excess Fares

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The New York Central Railroad will abolish excess fares on the Twentieth Century and Advanced Century between Toledo and New York, effective November 1.

Wabash Railway Loadings Decline

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—During the week ended October 10, the Wabash Railway handled 14,843 revenue cars compared to 15,244 in the previous week and 17,993 in the week ended October 11, 1930.

Europeans Due to Discover Something About America

—By B. C. FORBES—

B. C. Forbes

COLUMBUS DISCOVERED America; the rest of the world will shortly make a few discoveries regarding America.

Europeans are being told daily that America is on the brink of bankruptcy. They are being told that we will be inevitably pushed off the gold standard.

Russia is not the only country that predicts revolution here. It is loudly proclaimed that nine out of every 10 people in America are starving. Readers of European newspapers have the idea that the majority of our banks have failed. French francs are described as infinitely safer than American dollars.

Europeans will shortly discover how grossly they have been misled. They will discover that the United States, instead of going bankrupt, is by far the strongest nation in the world. They will discover that the losses of bank depositors have been only a little more than 1 per cent of our total deposits. They will discover that the United States dollar has become the world's prime currency, its standard medium of exchange.

They are likely to discover that recovery has already set in here, and they certainly will discover that America will be the first nation to restore prosperity. They will discover that this is now the most favored land on the face of the earth.

In short, Europeans will discover the truth regarding America.

THOSE WHO SPEND dollars now get a lot for their money—it won't always be so. Today the dollar will buy three times as many railway or industrial stocks as it would have bought in 1929, more than two and one-half times as many utility stocks, fully three times as much cotton, four times as much rubber, two and one-half times as much copper, two and one-third times as much corn, two and one-fourth times as much wheat. The 1931 dollar is worth more than half as much again as the 1929 dollar, on the average.

This table gives the extent of decline from the 1929 average and shows the present purchasing power of $1 as compared with two years ago:

| | % Decline From 1929 | Purchasing Power Of Dol |
|---|---|---|
| Rubber | 75.5 | 4.07 |
| Railroad stocks | 69.5 | 3.14 |

CHRISTY THOMAS, Seattle Chamber of Commerce, wires this cheery item:

"Seattle is first among cities of the first class to raise its Community Fund. The fund was oversubscribed by $16,000 one day ahead of time. Our quota was $774,175, and amount subscribed $790,005.98. Total subscription will exceed $800,000."

A prediction: Many cities, both big and little, will nobly exceed their relief fund quotas in coming weeks.

F. A. SEIBERLING, 72-year-old head of Seiberling Rubber, is a wonder. He has been visiting New York on a 25,000-mile tour which will occupy nine weeks and afford him opportunity to address dealers' meetings all over the land. The company will end its fiscal year this month with a profit; 1930 was the only year of its decade's existence that it failed to earn a profit.

One step of many he took to meet depression conditions was to develop a very superior grade of tire, salable at a high price—and at a profit. In the last eight months sales exceeded the total for 1930.

Obviously Mr. Seiberling believes that the way to find business is to go energetically after it in every direction.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Curb traders returned to a dull market today. A small volume of selling had accumulated over the extended week-end and the result was a mild depression of prices, although the chief characteristic of the trading was its dullness. Volume contracted sharply on the slow downward movement and transactions through the earlier hours were reduced well below recent levels. Losses were largely fractional.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange giving all stocks and bonds traded (00 omitted in sales column of stock list; 000 omitted in sales column of bond list).

GRAINS OPEN HIGHER

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—(AP.)—Grain prices averaged higher early today influenced by scantiness of wheat supplies on ocean passage and by hostilities between Japan and China. Fears were expressed that the warlike complications would eventually involve Russia. Opening ⅜@1⅛ cents higher, wheat afterward held near the initial limits. Corn started unchanged to ⅜ cent up, and subsequently reacted.

Wheat price advances resulting from strained relations of oriental powers led soon to enlarged selling to realize profits, and the market in some cases dipped temporarily to below Saturday's finish.

Provisions were responsive to hog market upturns.

The following quotations on the Chicago Board of Trade are reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

LOCAL MARKET QUIET AND NARROW

Volume of Trading Lower With Prices Holding at Previous Closing Levels

Trading opened quietly on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange over the week-end. The fuels held around the levels at which they left off last Saturday. Lone Star was moderately active in a narrow range, forfeiting a small overnight gain, but absorbing the relatively small offerings on only a slight recession from the starting price.

In the industrial section business was confined mainly to odd-lot transactions at prices showing practically no change from the previous closings. Mesta Machine, Blaw Knox, United Engineering and D. L. Clark were all unchanged. The "big board" reacted a little in the early dealings, but the selling was not persistent.

Federal Reserve Reports Sharp Drop in Loans On Securities.

In line with what had been expected, this week's consolidated condition statement of member banks reporting to the Federal Reserve shows heavy contraction in the total of loans on securities. Such loans dropped by $265,000,000 to $6,081,000,000 a figure $2,179,000,000 under the total on the corresponding date last year. Of the foregoing decline, it was noted that $215,000,000 occurred in security loans of member banks in the New York district. Investments were cut $85,000,000, while member borrowings from the regional banks rose $120,000,000 in the week and are now $235,000,000 heavier than a year ago. The spurt in demand for accommodation on the part of member banks, it may be seen was unquestionably a powerful influence in making for the higher bank rates announced at New York, Boston and Cleveland.

Though always a disagreeable subject, the matter of increased taxation looms as an ultimate development which the stock market must be prepared to face. The harder heads in Wall street, those whose emotions are not swayed by the march of quotations on the ticker, fully realize that the government must move without undue delay to devise ways and means of balancing its budget. Income tax payments are running steadily behind those of last year, and the 1931 returns, it can be safely ventured, will prove small on current schedules. Those who declare in favor of early and drastic action to increase government revenues, maintain that this step is essential to the welfare of outstanding federal bonds, and to the standing of the Treasury's credit position.

Old-timers in the Street harked back as far as their memories served them today in endeavoring to recall another instance wherein the bond market by its action had served to force a firm into insolvency. The suspension of a member firm announced today, one interested primarily in the bond end of the investment business, was ascribed officially to the unusual depreciation in high grade investment bonds. According to well founded comment, this firm came by its difficulties chiefly in consequence of the unsettlement experienced recently in the market for municipal bonds.

Though his most recent venture on the bull side proved a trifle premature, one large operator, among the most successful of this generation who has gathered up a fortune by dealings on both sides of the market has taken a substantial new long position. He expressed the opinion that many securities are intrinsically cheap, and followed this with the assertion that "most of the dire things which people expect to happen seldom do," and continues, "if they do happen they do not prove to be as bad as had been feared. Two years from now," he concluded, "current prices will be considered just as cheap as they were too high in the fall of 1929."

Regardless of whether the stock market continues on its straight line path toward higher levels in the new week, or devotes most of the period to digest its recent gains, or even slips back a bit, there seems to be indisputable evidence that the long downtrend has been finally broken. In recognition of this fact, Standard Statistics, which has been advising a stand-off attitude on stocks for some time, has now assumed a definitely constructive position toward the market.

Federal Reserve Formed To Supply New Money

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

This is the second article of a series describing the workings of the Federal Reserve System and discussing the changes in its operations which probably will be suggested at the next session of Congress.

THE NEED FOR AN ELASTIC currency which could be expanded or contracted in accordance with the requirements of business was the impelling factor which brought the Federal Reserve System into existence.

Before the passage of the Federal Reserve Act there were only four kinds of paper money in use in the United States. A brief study of these will show that the volume of available currency was subject to only minor changes and that the factors controlling issues of currency had no relation to the needs of business. The four types are still in existence.

The first type of money consists of gold certificates. These are secured dollar for dollar by actual gold held in the Treasury of the United States. The amount of the issue is changeable only as the volume of gold in the Treasury changes.

Silver Certificates Limited

THE SECOND CLASS consists of silver certificates secured dollar for dollar by coined silver. There is not a gold dollar's worth of silver in a silver dollar. Silver coins are issued only to provide a medium for making change and for minor transactions. The issue of silver certificates is limited by law to prevent the use of this medium for inflation of currency.

The third type of currency consists of United States notes or greenbacks which came into existence in the Civil War. Originally they were secured by nothing and were merely government promises to pay. At present they are secured by gold to the extent of about 50 per cent of the total in circulation but their issuance is limited by law to $346,000,000.

National Bank Notes

NATIONAL BANK NOTES form the fourth class of paper money. These notes are prepared by the United States government but are issued in the names of individual national banks. To secure the privilege of issuing currency the banks must deposit certain types of United States bonds with the Treasury equal to the amounts of the currency. The bonds carrying circulation privileges bear low rates of interest. The total of these bonds is not sufficient to allow all the national banks to issue their quotas of notes so that this type of circulation is definitely limited. The banks are required to maintain a fund in Washington amounting to 5 per cent of their circulation to provide for redemption. The interest on the bonds yields the banks a small profit over the expenses of currency issue.

Obviously none of these issues of currency is susceptible to expansion or to control by any centralized body. This inflexible money system increased the danger of panics from shortage of funds and offered few advantages over a system confined entirely to metal.

New Paper Money Issued

THE FEDERAL RESERVE ACT provided for a new type of paper money which could be increased or decreased to meet changing conditions. Realizing the dangers of inflation, the law provided for strict rules about issuing this new type of currency.

Bankers believe that the experiences of the 17 years of the operation of the Federal Reserve system have shown a flexible currency to have been helpful. Some of them now feel that the original law was too conservative and that further flexibility can be safely authorized in the future.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND VIEWS

CALIFORNIA GOLD

Gold mining is being revived in California. Because of the present depressed prices of commodities, the relative value of gold is higher than it has been for many years previously. Gold mines which have not been worked for a decade or more are being reopened. Gold bearing quartz veins are again being sought, even at great depths, and low grade ore deposits are again being worked over with profit. Gold dredgers in the streams are resuming operations, after a lapse of years.

ALPHA PORTLAND CEMENT

Alpha Portland Cement Company has notified the New York Stock Exchange of its intention to decrease its common stock to $18,486,000 from $24,134,500. The stated value of the no-par common will be reduced to $26 a share from $33.94, as at present, to have a larger part of the book value of the stock represented in surplus.

DENIES BOND ISSUE

A. F. Hockenbeamer, president of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, said that the company has practically completed its refunding program from the present year, and denied reports that the company is contemplating the issuance of a large block of bonds in the near future.

NILES BEMENT POND ACQUISITION

Pratt & Whitney, subsidiary of Niles Bement Pond Company, has acquired business and assets of Keller Mechanical Engineering Corporation, of Brooklyn.

DIRECTORS CAN AID MANAGED RECOVERY

Time Held Ripe for Large Companies to Turn Away From Policy of Hoarding

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Corporate directors can play a useful role in contributing to the managed recovery which the administration at Washington, in co-operation with bankers, has attempted.

At a time when it is socially important to discourage hoarding, these guardians of the excessive surplus of strong corporations can set an example in turning away themselves from the policy of hoarding. Instead of contributing to the vicious forces making for a continuation of the depression, they should liberalize their dividend distributions to stockholders. In some instances, too, it might be useful, as has been suggested, for companies rich in cash to buy up a limited amount of their own shares when they are undervalued at the market place.

Mr. Rukeyser

STOCK CAMPAIGNS

Moreover, now that the froth of inflation has been blown off standard stocks, it is a good time for corporate managers to consider campaigns to merchandise stocks of their own company on easy, partial payment terms to employes and customers. Admittedly, investment buying power has been at low ebb, but such as there is could be wisely extended by sponsorship of sales of stock on the installment plan by the corporation itself.

There is precedent for this in the manner in which the Bell Telephone Securities Company merchandised on easy terms the stock of its parent company, the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. The public ownership campaign was initiated years ago when the stock sold below the lowest level of the current year. The campaign was extended during the rising market, but it is everlastingly to the credit of the Bell system that it voluntarily put the brakes on this movement when, toward the latter stages of the bull market, the telephone stock climbed to a level which was no longer reasonable in terms of stated assets and known earning power.

GOOD WILL OPPORTUNITY

Wall Street brokers, looking for a quick market, are inclined to exploit suckers by sponsoring stocks when they are dear and hence are in obvious demand, and deserting them in depression periods when they are genuinely cheap. But the management of vast permanent corporations should recognize the enormous good will opportunity of adding investors to their lists at a time when many stocks are undervalued. The advice concerning partial payment campaigns to sell stock to employes and customers is limited to high-grade outstanding corporations, whose stocks possess investment merit and whose shares are not overpriced.

The idea is to regulate buying power at a time when the market needs security buyers and at a time when buying is not a sucker game, as it is near the peak of a bull market, when conventional brokers become active in distributing circulars analyzing the merit of premier stocks.

Expects Earnings To Drop 40% For 1931

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—More than 500 industrial companies have reported earnings for the first half of the current year, indicating a decline in aggregate net of 53 per cent, as compared with the corresponding period of 1930, says the Standard Statistics Company. Railroad earnings declined 61 per cent, while utilities gained 2 per cent. Operating economies and wage and dividend cuts are increasing the proportion of net to gross sales. The drastic earnings decline and heavy inventory adjustments in the last half of 1930 should materially improve the comparative showing this year, although full year results undoubtedly will be close to 40 per cent below the relatively unfavorable 1930 experience.

States to Receive Forest Revenues

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—Thirty-two states and territories will shortly be paid $1,240,608 for the fiscal year 1931, as their 25 per cent share of receipts from national forests located within their boundaries, Department of Agriculture states.

These receipts are paid in lieu of taxes on the federal property. In addition, $496,243 will become available for expenditure by the Forest Service for roads and trails through the forests. Payment to the states will be turned over to the counties containing the forest lands for roads and schools.

Way to Get At a Cold Is Through the Bowels

As soon as you catch cold, the pores close; perspiration is checked. Gases and waste can't escape through the skin. That's why your doctor's first advice in case of colds is a mild laxative like cascara. Medical authorities agree it actually strengthens bowel muscles. You get cascara in its most pleasant form in candy Cascarets.

Remember this when you catch cold; whenever breath is bad; tongue coated; or you're headachy, bilious, constipated.

Why resort to harsher things when Cascarets activate the bowels so quickly, so harmlessly and pleasantly — and cost only a dime?

VITAL FACTS
TRUST INVESTMENTS

●

Discretionary Investment Power

IT becomes the duty of the Trustee, when given full discretion with respect to the management of investment, to purchase securities which in its opinion provide a strong protection of principal and offer a satisfactory rate of income. This may require the purchase of either legal or non-legal investments.

In any event, when such securities are purchased, they must be carefully reviewed and periodically analyzed to determine whether their qualifications continue to be suitable for trust purposes.

Discretionary powers are advisable only when the Trustee named has demonstrated its ability to conservatively and wisely manage investments.

The Trust Department of The Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh is directed by men of long experience in trust matters, specially trained for their specific duties. In selecting this Company as Trustee you may secure responsible management when most needed with the assurance that you will be prudently, thoughtfully and well served.

We invite you to call upon our trust officers at your convenience, or to write for our booklet "Solving the Problems that Confront Your Estate."

WINTER CRUISES
IN SUNNY SEAS

Winter will soon have us in its icy grip. But no matter how cold and blustery, wet and disagreeable it may be, somewhere the sun will be shining its brightest, and somewhere luxuriant nature will be alive with color. You, too, can enjoy summer weather this "winter" by joining one of the four world cruises scheduled for departure in December and January. Sailing from New York, your cruise ship quickly overtakes summer, and thereafter keeps abreast of this most pleasant season of the year for the four or five months' duration of the trip. Reservations for these cruises are now being received by the Travel Bureau of the Mellon National Bank. Early reservation assures a wider choice of the preferred space.

Gendarmes Take Food From Numerous Foragers

CHAPTER XXIX.

Gray misery sits sullenly in the compartment as we move off. We fix on an outlying spot and there leave the train, separating, always in pairs, to forage systematically over the countryside. We have sufficiently studied this art of patroling.

Albert and I are together. We come on a large farmstead. A warm odor of cattle and of milk comes out to greet us. There are hens cackling, too. We look at them covetously, but restrain ourselves, as there are people in the barn. "Good day," we say. No one takes any notice. We continue to stand about. At last a woman shrieks at us. "Get out of the yard, you pack of beggars!"

The next place. The farmer is standing outside. He has a long military greatcoat and is lightly flickering a whip.

"Like to know how many have been here already?" he says. "Just a dozen!"

We are surprised; after all we came out with the first train. They must have come out last evening and passed the night in barns or out in the open.

"A hundred come in a day sometimes," the farmer persists. "What can a man do? I ask you."

GIVEN EGGS

We see his point. Then his eye suddenly fastens on Albert's uniform. "Flanders?" he asks. "Flanders," replies Albert. "Me too," says he and goes within. He comes back with two eggs apiece for us. We fumble with our pocketbooks. He shakes his head. "You can keep that. We'll call it a bargain, eh?"

"Well, thanks, Mate."

"Not at all—But don't spread it about, or half Germany will be here tomorrow."

The next house. A notice on the hedge: "No foragers. Beware of the dog." That is practical.

We push on. A spacious field and a large farmhouse. We go into the kitchen. In the middle is a cooking range of the latest model that would more than serve a hotel. On the right a piano, on the left a piano. Facing the cooking range is a superb bookcase with fluted columns and books with gilt bindings. And in front the same old table and three-legged wooden stools. It looks comical. Especially the two pianos.

The farmer's wife appears. "Have you got any yarn? But it must be real."

We look at each other. "Yarn? No!"

"Silk then? Silk stockings?"

Synopsis

Ernst, who enlisted when a schoolboy, tells the postwar story of a group of friends from the same city who return home when peace is made to find a strange new world in which they seem out of place. Problems of making a living and of adjustment to a regime of peace obsess them. School to which they return, seems impractical and useless. They are terrified when alone, disturbed when with other than their companions of the trenches. Ernst and three of the group visit Gieseke in the asylum, a depressing ordeal. Afterward Ernst and Albert Trosske walk together, discussing their plight. They had pictured peace as desirable, but it proves otherwise. Finally several of the friends decide on a foraging expedition—a square feed may cheer them up. They assemble at the station, ready to take the first train out in the morning.

Now Go On

Slowly it dawns on us she wants to exchange, not to sell.

"No, we haven't any silk," I say. "But we will gladly pay you for anything."

She dismisses the idea. "Money! Pooh! It's not good even to wipe the floor with! It's worth less every day." She ambles off.

"May we have a drink of water, anyway?" Albert calls after her. She turns around ungraciously and pours us out one glass.

CHASED BY WOMAN

"Now be off! I haven't time to waste standing about," she snaps. "You ought to be at work instead of stealing other people's time."

Albert takes the glass from her and smashes it down on the floor. He it speechless with rage. But now the woman turns on us and lets fly, like a tinsmith in full swing. We take to our heels—The strongest man could not stand up to that.

We trudge on. As we go, we meet whole hordes of foragers. They circle about the farmsteads like hungry wasps around a piece of plum tart. We began to see now how the farmers must be driven almost mad by it, and why they become so abusive. But we persist all the same, get fired out here, perhaps score something there, are cursed by other foragers again in return.

During the afternoon we all foregather at the pub. Our booty is not much—a few pounds of potatoes, some meal, a few eggs, apples, a couple of heads of cabbage and some meat. Only Willy is sweating. He comes in last of all with half a pig's head under his arm. Other packages are bulging from his pockets. But as against that, he no longer has any greatcoat. He has exchanged it, because he has another at home, and then, he thinks that after all spring must come again sometime.

We have still two hours before the train leaves and they bring me luck. In the barroom is a piano of sorts, on which I give a performance of "The Maiden's Prayer," all pedals down. This brings out the landlady, who listens a while and then beckons me to go outside with her. I elbow my way into the lobby, where she explains to me that she is very fond of music, but unfortunately no one who can play ever comes there. Then she asks me if I would not be willing to come again, and passes me half a pound of butter, saying that there is more where that came from. I fall in with the proposal, of course, and undertake to play two hours each time for as much. I return to the piano and as the next item do my best with the "Heidegrab" and "Stolzenfels am Rhein."

STOPPED BY GENDARMES

Then we set off for the station. On the way we meet a lot more foragers, all intending to return by the same train as ourselves. But they are frightened of the gendarmes. At last a whole troop has collected and they stand outside in the windy darkness, hiding in a corner some little distance from the station so as to escape observation before the train shall arrive. Once aboard there is less risk of being caught.

But we are out of luck. Two gendarmes with bicycles suddenly appear before us. They have ridden up silently from behind.

"Halt! All remain where you are!"

There is a terrible commotion. Every one is begging and praying. "Let us go, quick! We have to catch the train!"

"The train won't be here for a good quarter of an hour yet," says the fatter of the two, unperturbed. "This way, all of you." He indicates a street lamp—They will be able to see better there. One stands guard to see that nobody sneaks off while the other conducts the examination. Nearly all are women, children or old folks; most of them stand silent and resigned.—They are used to being treated so and never dared to hope really they might have the luck to get home with a half a pound of butter.

I take a good look at the gendarmes.—Yes, there they are, just as snobbish and superior in their green uniforms, their red faces, their swords and their revolvers as they used to be up the line.—Might! I say to myself. Might, always Might—and be it no more than an inch it is merciless.

TAKE PEOPLE'S FOOD

One woman has some eggs taken from her. Just as she is about to make off, the fat fellow calls her back. "Hey! What have you got there?" He points to her skirt. "Out with it!" She is obstinate and squats on the ground. "Quick, out with it!" From under her skirt she produces a piece of bacon. He puts it with the rest. "Thought you'd get away with it, did you?" She can hardly believe what has happened and keeps on making grabs to get it again. "But I paid for it!—Every bit of my money it cost me!"

He shoves her hand away, at the time hauling out a length of sausage from inside a woman's blouse. "Foraging is forbidden, you know that yourself."

The woman is quite willing to forego the eggs, but she pleads to have back the bacon. "Well, give me the bacon, at least. Whatever shall I say when I get home? It's for my children!" She kneels in the mud.

"Go to the Food Office and see about extra ration cards!" snarls the gendarme. "That's none of our business. Next!"

The woman staggers away and shrieks, "Is that what my man was killed for?—that my children should starve!"

A young girl who is next crams, gulps, chokes down her butter; her face is smothered in grease, her eyes goggle; she wolfs and gorges, so as to have at least a little before it is taken away from her. But it is small comfort—she will only be sick after.

"Next!" No one moves. The gendarme, who is stooping down, calls again, "Next!" He straightens up wrathfully and meets Willy's eyes. Perceptibly calmer, "Are you next?" he asks.

DAILY SHORT STORY

All Arranged

(All names of characters in this story are fictitious.)

Man's Proposal Is Accepted By Beautiful Girl

"It's all arranged."

Mrs. Sutton's voice carried far over the lake. She was calling to friends ashore, informing them that some coming social event was in readiness.

Merle Innis was in his launch at the community dock, puttering with the motor. Retta (Henrietta) Gregory lay prone on the dock, watching Merle.

The little party down on the float evidently did not catch what Mrs. Sutton had said, because of inane chattering.

"Wha-a-at?" shouted Miss Fortescue.

Mrs. Sutton cupped her hands and shouted so that her words echoed from the wooded shores.

"It's all arranged!"

Merle dropped the wrench and sat up, wiping his hands on cotton waste.

"Retta," he said with a grimace, "don't you utterly abhor anything that is already arranged?"

"I double abhor it, Merle."

She swung her lithe form around and let herself down to the deck of Merle's boat, and because her skirt caught on the edge of the dock, Merle politely looked the other way.

"Pooh!" Retta said, "you won't be shocked to death. I'm properly under-dressed."

"You're a devil," Merle said, and grinned at her.

"Will I blow your old tub to so-and-gone if I smoke?" she asked.

He shook his head and held a match for her.

"You are just dern-tootin', Mr. Merle Wayland Innis," Retta said, after a drag at her cigaret. "I detest prearranged things."

ALWAYS FAILURES

"Looking back over your vast experiences of some forty or less social seas[illegible] Old Woman, did you ever kn[illegible] prearranged party to be a [illegible] success?"

"No, Infant, I nev[illegible]id."

Merle was 29 and Retta was 20. They had various names for each other, but most frequently used "Old Woman" and "Infant."

"And," Merle went on, "hasn't nine hundred and ninety-nine parties out of a thousand that were strictly impromptu—quite unexpected—turned out to be wows?"

"They have," Retta agreed.

Merle handed her the gaff. "Shove off," I want to see how she works."

"She's working swell," Merle observed.

Retta eyed him for a moment. "Folks pestering you about marrying me, Merle?"

He stared at her so long that the match he had lighted for a cigaret burned his fingers.

"Ouch!" he said. "The first name of Miss Blazes!"

Retta laughed.

"You've got a nice way with you, Merle."

"No taffy. What's up? Are you a mind-reader?"

"Use the old bean, Infant. You remarked to me that you detested things that were all arranged. Very well. Now to the next fact—for Lordy knows how long our adorable parents have arranged that we should be married . . ."

MARRIAGE ARRANGED

Retta was checking off on her fingers.

"And you forgot to add, to each other."

"Right. They have taken it for granted that because they have been great friends since some time before the creation and because we were brought up on the same street and because we were—er—"

"Created male and female," Merle added as she hesitated.

"Infant!" Retta giggled. Then she added, "But you have the drift of it — because of these named facts, it has been all arranged."

"All arranged," Merle echoed, rather dolefully.

"Tentatively," Retta finished this with a decisive nod.

"Why the devil do doting parents become possessed of the idea that their offspring, after a sufficient number of years to take them through teething and their adolescence, are still without minds and hearts and feeling and desires of their own?"

"Meaning, Young Feller, that we are not at all concerned, that we are not breaking out into a rash in our anxiety to get married."

"To each other."

"That's for granted, Merle. What's the matter with you—always putting in that 'to-each-other' stuff? Say—"

Retta sat up and nudged Merle in his ribs.

"Say—does it mean that you are considering a marriage—to someone?"

"I have considered it occasionally."

"Well—for—for—never mind—how could you be so idiotic as to be thinking of marriage?"

"Only now and then. You, unless you are entirely different from other girls, have been thinking of it constantly since you were old enough to play house."

"And now," Retta said, "who is she?

Merle busied himself getting another cigaret from his case.

"You heard me—don't stall. Who is she?"

SEEKS GIRL'S NAME

"Why—uh—I haven't proposed to anyone."

"And I've been proposed to exactly 14 times."

"Pooh! It's different with a girl. She can be proposed to without bother or trouble. She can say, 'No,' or 'Perhaps,' or 'Let me think it over.' But how about a man?"

"What man?"

"Look here, Old Lady, if you don't think I'm a man——"

He pretended to shake her.

"All right. We'll say, for the sake of argument, that you are a man."

"Retta, you are a devil—but one darn smart little devil. What I'm getting at is this—a girl may be proposed to. It doesn't follow that she must say yes or even that she cannot change her mind if she does say yes. But how about the man? Suppose I proposed and the girl said her little 'Yes,' where would I be?"

"Married before long. But—"

"Wait—no buts in this—if I changed my mind and told the girl so, what would I be? A cad and worse. I have to stick to my bargain. You can squeal out on the absurd promise that it is a woman's privilege to change her mind."

"Now, Merle Wayland Innis—who is she? Who IS she?"

"Haven't decided. Toots Hanson is cute but gabby. Kit Yeaton is extremely beautiful but—well, they should have named her 'Dora.'"

"Much you know about it."

"I know. And say, what's the big idea, putting me through a third degree? How about yourself? How many of these 14 men or so-called men, who have proposed to you have been turned down flat and how many are on the waiting list?"

"Why, Infant — what a personal question!"

"Almost as personal as asking me which girl I intended to marry."

"Clever—smart—if you ever went broke you could make a lot of money being a lawyer."

"What did you say his name was?"

"I haven't decided. There's Wally Ervine, nice boy, high scholastic honors—well behaved——."

"And a perfect simp!"

"Why, Merle!"

"He is. For Pete's sake, Old Lady, marry a man."

"Well, Sir Harold Millwillikie—he'll come into a real title before long—"

"Quit kidding. You wouldn't marry that stuttering monocle-holder, Retta."

"No, I wouldn't. But how about Tom Darcy?"

"Pretty darn good chap, Tom is."

"Then you approve of Tom as a husband for me?"

"Didn't say that."

"Well, I don't quite approve of Lola, either."

"Oh, you don't?"

"No, Merle, honestly. She isn't suited to you. Now, Tom—"

"Aw, let up on Tom. Look here, what's going to happen if you step out and marry Tom and I marry Lola?"

"The usual thing—two more homes, two more families—"

"Oh, ho! You approve of families, do you, Old Lady?"

"I do, and I'm not such an old lady—"

"Of course not, honey. I mentioned Vesuvius. What I mean is, what will happen at our homes?"

"Weeping and wailing because the marriage of little Retta and nice Merle was all arranged and didn't jell."

"Explosions in both families—that's what."

"Oh, no. I told mother positively, the other day, when she said that I ought to be getting ready to marry you, that it was all off. So she doesn't expect me to marry you now."

"Is that so? Well, I hinted the same at home myself."

MERLE PROPOSES

"Did they ask you why?"

"They did."

"What did you say, Infant?"

"Tell me what you said."

"You tell me first."

"Well," Merle answered, "I told the truth. I said that it was absurd, because you wouldn't have me. Now what did you say?"

"I said," Retta leaned over and dipped her hand in the water so as to avoid looking at him. "I said that I couldn't marry you very well until you proposed."

Silence. A long and rather embarrassing silence. Then Merle spoke.

"Got a peach of an idea, Old Lady."

"Yes? Shoot."

"Let's fool the folks and get married to each other!"

"If this is a proposal, Infant, kiss me!"

He obeyed.

"How was it, Old Lady?" he asked.

"Heavenly, Infant—encore!"

A Needed Change

Col. McGovern Has a Praiseworthy Plan in His Proposal To Make Voting Places Attractive.

It is greatly to Col. C. C. McGovern's credit that with another term as County Commissioner assured him, and this time with friendly colleagues, he is turning his attention not so much to patronage matters and the promotion of selfish interests as to the welfare of the county.

There have been cynics who predicted that if McGovern came into power he would undertake to build up a machine of his own. The proposal that came from him yesterday that the polling places be made more attractive, so as to induce a larger percentage of the honest and independent citizens to vote, is not such as would come from a man whose thoughts were turned to the construction of a political machine of the sort to which the people of Allegheny County are accustomed.

McGovern suggests that permanent voting places be installed in public schools and surrounded with all the refinements of environment and equipment that are found in public libraries and banks.

He says—and it is true—that many persons, especially women, are deterred from voting by the unsavory character of some of the polling places. No respectable woman is willing, if she can avoid it, to go to a shed in a back alley and subject herself to the stares of the loafers and "ward heelers" that are always to be found hanging around the polls on election day.

McGovern has some special suggestions for voting places in controlled wards notorious for election cheating. The suggestions are designed to give the honest and independent voters a square deal.

His plan is a praiseworthy one and, if carried out, will go far to preserve to the people the fruits of their recent victory. Bad government is due as much to the abstention of upright and intelligent citizens from voting as to the folly and wickedness of others, and if attractive voting places will bring many of the stay-at-homes to the polls—and we believe they will—the change recommended by McGovern is much to be desired.

Meets the Requirements

Judge Stadtfeld Is in Every Way Suitable for the Superior Court Bench.

The existing vacancy on the Superior Court bench should be filled by a man who measures up to the high standards of that tribunal, to maintain the regard in which it is held both by the legal profession and the public generally. This is the first consideration which should actuate Gov. Pinchot in making the appointment, though it is natural he should desire to select a man who afterward can be elected.

Judge Joseph D. Stadtfeld unquestionably meets all the requirements of legal knowledge and judicial poise, having a regard for the humanities of law as well as the technicalities. Furthermore, he is of the type that probably could be elected, even though he is the antithesis of a political judge.

His defeat in the recent Common Pleas Court primary was caused principally by the number of candidates who beclouded the issue, and the acceptance by so many persons of his election as a foregone conclusion. They turned their attention to others, believing Stadtfeld sure of victory. Chagrin at his defeat was general.

Such men should not be lost to public service. If the Governor will appoint Judge Stadtfeld, as he has been widely urged to do, his performance on the bench will convince the remainder of the state that he is worthy of election.

A Significant Raid

County Detectives' Visit to North Side Gambling House Is Threat to Protected Vice.

The most significant and important feature of the raid made Sunday on a notorious North Side gambling house is that the raiders were not city police but county detectives.

The county officers seldom give their attention to crimes committed within the city. It has been their custom to leave wrongdoing in the city to the city police. If the latter failed to act, the county authorities have shrugged their shoulders and excused themselves from doing anything about it on the ground that their forces were too few to undertake to police any but the outlying districts.

Under this system the city administration was easily able, if it cared to protect commercial vice, gambling and other criminal "rackets," to do so without interference.

The gambling house raided Sunday is said to have operated without interference for years. Who can doubt that it was protected?

There is a threat in this affair to other illegal resorts in Pittsburgh.

It is to be hoped Chief Murren, of the county detectives, will put the threat into effect.

It Should Be Short

With But One Subject to Be Considered the Legislature Will Have No Excuse for a Long Session.

Word comes from Harrisburg that the special session of the Legislature which Gov. Pinchot plans to call to work out an unemployment relief plan probably will be convoked about November 9.

The Governor believes the session will end before Christmas. It is to be hoped so.

Sessions of the Legislature cost the taxpayers a great deal of money. Only the gravest emergency justifies the Governor in calling an extraordinary session, and it should be made as brief as possible.

The forthcoming special meeting will be the third called under the Constitution of 1873. The first was called by Gov. Pennypacker in 1906 for revision of the election laws, and the second by Pinchot in 1926 to consider a number of matters.

Both sessions were brief, and we see no reason why the meeting next month, limited as it is to one subject, should not transact its business expeditiously.

The Haunt

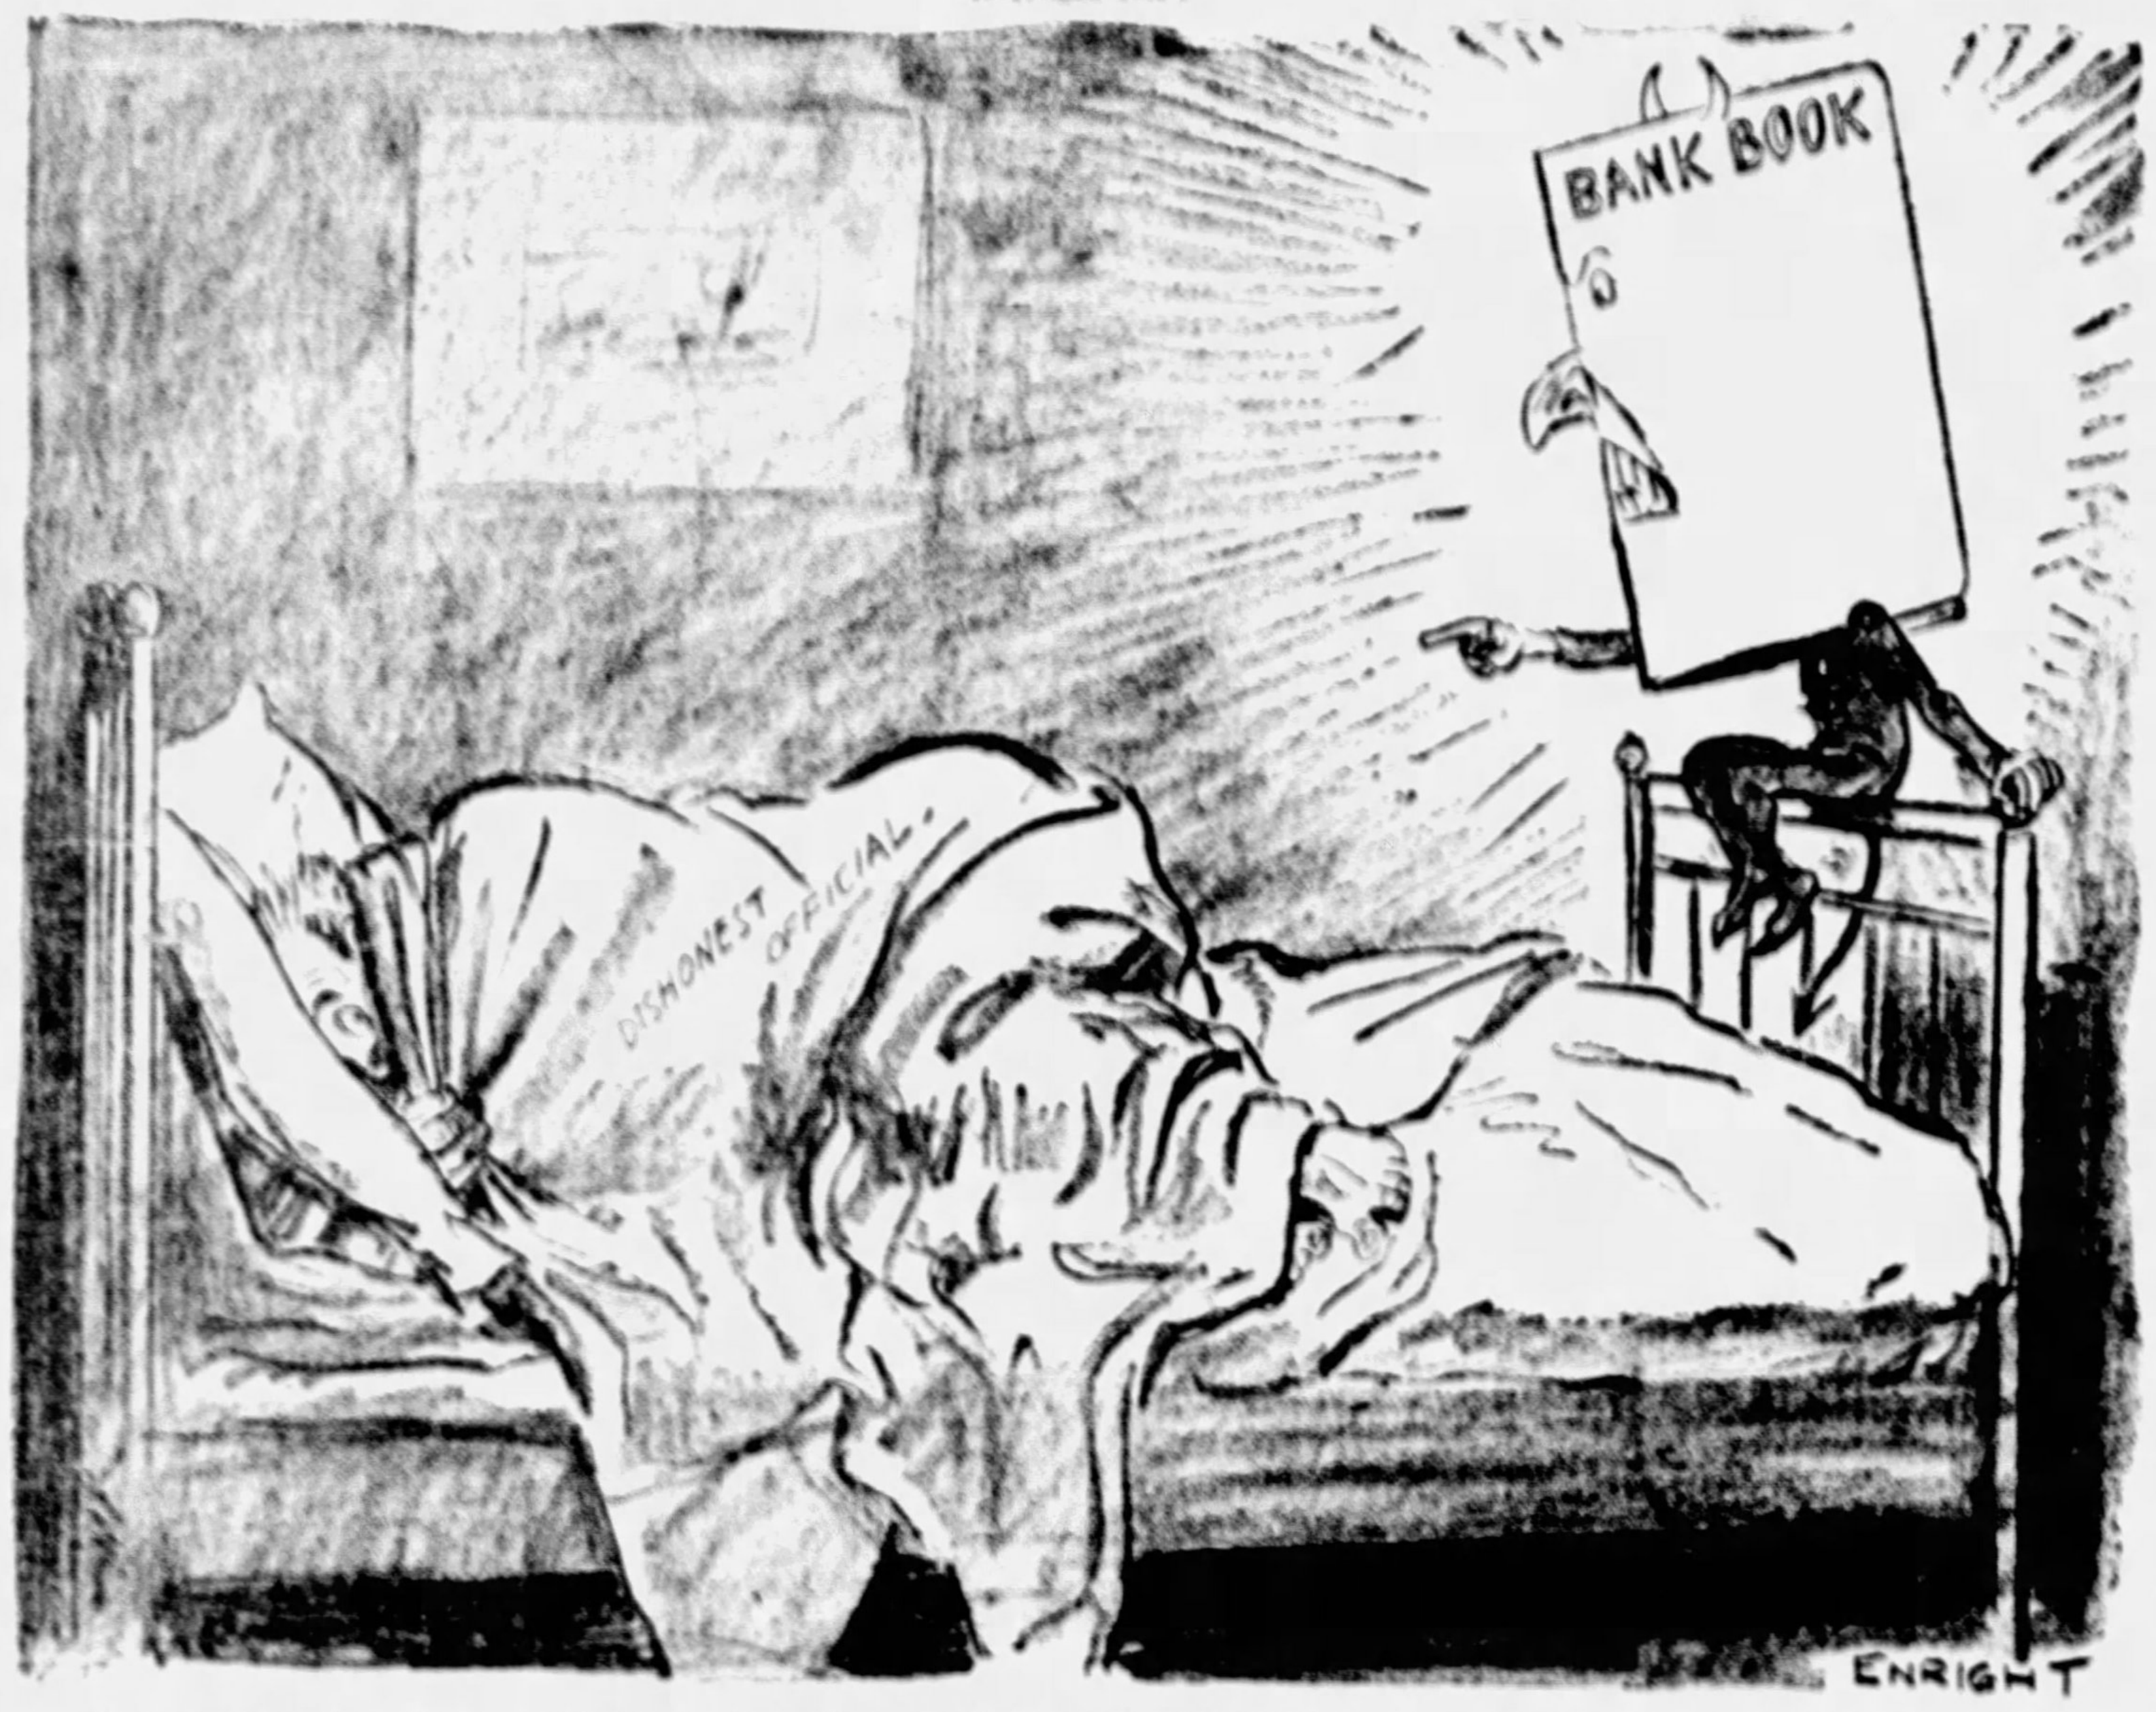
(Copyright, 1931.)



Back in the days before "little tin boxes" came into prominence as the magic source of almost limitless wealth, a bank book showing a nice fat balance was a possession to be proud of.

Now, in the cases of dishonest public servants, who have accumulated huge sums in excess of official salaries and legitimate earnings and who failed to render due account thereof to Uncle Sam, the bank book is a bogeyman, hovering over them by day, haunting them by night.

AND THIS BOGEYMAN WILL CATCH 'EM if they don't watch out.

For it's a crime, even for grafters, bootleggers, rum-runners, peddlers of political favors, auctioneers of public offices, to fail to share their ill-gotten gains with the Federal Government.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Oct. 13—During a season when the theater was drooping toward what Wall street calls "default levels," one actor stepped out and made record breaking stage history. His was the most astonishing box office draw the Rialto has known in years.

The comedian turning the trick was Lou Holz, thin young dialect comic discovered originally by Elsie Janis singing in a road house near San Francisco. He was urged to try his luck in New York and did. But outside a few revue and vaudeville engagements met indifferent success.

In fact he met greater success dabbling in the market, running a small investment into a sizable fortune which included an uptown apartment house. Save for an occasional engagement now and then, he had about deserted the stage when Wall street blew up and he lost everything.

Bewildered and disheartened he went on at the Palace as master of ceremony and it was his acute indifference and effortless funmaking that put him over. He was held and managed to find backers for a musical comedy that lasted several months.

After this show closed he went back to the Palace, again as master of ceremony, to accomplish the most extraordinary run in the history of that playhouse. For the first time the entire bill including Holz was retained intact for the second week.

Then, with minor changes due to prior engagements, went into the third, fourth and even seventh week. Thus did a hastily collected vaudeville bill become virtually a summer revue. It was Holz, with the aid of William Gaxton, who kept the show together and packed the house twice daily.

His salary, starting at $4,250 a week, ballooned to $6,500, one of the largest ever paid at the Palace. As a result Holz becomes the most sought after actor on Broadway. But what is more impressive is the un-actory action of Holz to his triumph. His hat fits him still.

Another fine performer that ran Holz a close race on the Palace bill was William Gaxton. He remained all during the Holz run and two weeks afterward. And if anyone puts over a song with more contagious zip, I've never heard him. I attended one show a dozen times just to hear him sing "You Do Something to Me." Chevalier, my eye!

* * *

Incidentally, passing what was once a vaudeville haven—Proctor's Fifth avenue, likely so named because it's on lower Broadway—I found it had, like many other theaters uptown, turned to rowdy continuous burlesque and the lobby once displaying pictures of Jack Norworth and Nora Bayes, Blossom Seeley, et al., now bristles with shocking photos of startingly nude ladies.

* * *

I am told most burlesque ladies of the moment come from the lower East Side — chiefly the Ghetto. They are usually dark skinned brunettes with bright cherry lips, although in the undressing numbers a blonde is the central figure. It is difficult work, as the shows are continuous, running from noon until midnight. Salaries range from $40 to $60 a week, with principals getting $75 to $125 top.

* * *

Back stage at a burlesque house a skimpily clad lady told me she was upset. She had just refused to share her dressing room with a best friend. "She has simply become," she explained, "a kleptomaniac on stealing."

* * *

There is something vigorously expressive about burlesque patrols. A frizzly-red-head wiggle dancer came into the wings puffing as the house roared with applause. Called back for a half dozen bows, a girl friend, passing, called: "Kid, that's selling a number! You certainly spit Ritz."

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

You fall in love . . . then you get married.

No you don't!

You get married. Then, maybe, if you behave yourself, you fall in love.

At least, that's how Dr. Beran Wolfe has romance programmed in his article "Romance vs. Marriage," in the September FORUM.

Remember that summer when you and Mabel "got that way?" You always thought you "fell in love" then. But you didn't. For love, real love, can't come until AFTER MARRIAGE, according to Dr. Wolfe.

"Love isn't the beginning of marriage, the premise of domestic happiness. Love is the REWARD of married happiness. Marriage is a task. Love is the PRODUCT of the correct solution of that task."

Then what was that dizzy-dazzle you went through? Why'd you go mooning around, running up telephone and florist bills, acting half crazy? Wasn't that love?

No, that was just a little preliminary excitement. Nature's come-on, as it were, to induce you to settle down and start a family. And you called it love because, being born in a sentimental era, you'd been trained to think that was love.

Trained by what? By mushie movies and slushy fiction and a general social attitude of "romantic infantilism." And what may that be? That's thinking about love when you're 46 as you thought about it when you were 16. Expecting marriage to be one long succession of dandy hearts n' valentines, expecting your husband to prove a Prince Charming or your wife a Princess Beautiful . . . expecting you'll "live happy ever after" just because you've been burnt up over each other during one summer's vacation.

And this "romantic infantilism" is the greatest menace to American marriage, claims Dr. Wolfe. For what happens when the fairy tales don't prove true? Do we settle down and try to make a success of marriage even though the thrills have departed? Do we patiently proceed with the partnership, hoping that romance still awaits us, around the turn of the trail? No we don't. Seven times out of ten we rush into the divorce court, and call the deal off.

We call the deal off because we honestly believe that it's no use going on. We've been taught that love comes but once and that if it departs, it cannot be forced or coaxed to return. For love, we are assured, "bloweth where it listeth." Love is a mystery, beyond man's creation or control.

All of which is pernicious piffle, says Dr. Wolfe. Most of the marriages that end in divorce haven't even started. The unhappy couples weren't in love . . . hadn't been in love . . . hadn't given themselves a chance to get in love. Love can only come "after years of co-operation, mutual enjoyment, and mutual suffering"—

And if we realized this fact at the beginning . . . if we were taught to select our mates for their sterling qualities, rather than for their romantic glamour . . . why then we could hope to achieve Real Love in time, no matter how prosaic our beginnings.

Sounds rather foolish, doesn't it? And yet, when you analyze it, isn't it a grand and grown-up idea? To work for love, as we'd work for any of the other great blessings of life . . .

To work, out of the fever and foolishness of mere physical infatuation into the growing beauty and peace of Lasting Love? Makes our ordinary conception of romance sound sort of silly, doesn't it?

Let's Help the Jobless First

By Claude G. Bowers

The American Legion owes such influence as it may have in public matters to the natural presumption that it is a patriotic organization whose members have been tested in the fire. That made it easy for the President to appeal to its patriotism against the proposal of many to make enormous demands on the treasury for the bonus. It was not difficult to show from the state of the nation's finances that any extraordinary demand on the treasury, not absolutely necessary to prevent dire distress, would be disastrous. This the President did by frankly stating facts and figures. Perhaps the appeal will be effective.

It is possible, however, to sympathize with the soldiers; they were promised so much, and they got so little! In the ballyhoo of war days, the boys marched forth to the applause of the multitude, bearing the promise that "nothing would be too good for them when they got home." But they came home to find their jobs gone, and they were no longer heroes in the business or industrial world. They were just men out of jobs. That is the sort of thing that converts saints into cynics, and yet it is an old story. They found that many had made millions out of the war, and they—the heroes—who went up against the guns had lost their jobs. That is one reason why we must wait a while to have another war that is not positively one of self-defense.

Soldiers Heroes to The Men at Home

Soldiers are always heroes to the men who stay at home when the fighters are baring their breasts, as barricades, to hold the enemy back from the home fireside where the others are toasting their shins. Kipling put a world of cynical wisdom in the lines to "Tommy Atkins," the English private:

"It's Tommy this, and Tommy that,
And Tommy wait outside;
But it's 'special train for Atkins'
When the trooper's on the tide."

It is shocking to find that the men who made the bloody footprints in the snows of Valley Forge were generally ignored or treated with contemptuous indifference after Yorktown. The officers organized their Society of Cincinnati, but the privates had no place in that aristocratic organization. It became so aristocratic in its plans that it was proposed to make membership hereditary. Some of the members of the more snobbish sort thought they saw in it the possibilities of an American order of nobility. It was in protest against this that Jefferson saw Washington, who took steps to crush that notion in its incipiency. But more effective, at the time, in discouraging the idea of an hereditary aristocracy was the organization of the democratic societies which Hamilton wanted crushed. In New York City Tammany Hall was organized for the purpose. It was considered a vulgar thing at first. Just ordinary men who worked for a living were members and what right had they to interfere in government or in the plans of their "betters?"

But the common soldier of the Revolution—he was out. Their "betters," including not a few officers and members of the Order of the Cincinnati, took advantage of the funding of the debt to swindle the common soldiers out of the certificates for pay they did not get in money. When men, like Madison, protested against the shame of robbing the privates of the Revolution Wadsworth, and others of the "wise and the good," who had profited by the swindle, declared in Congress they were "tired of hearing about the common soldier." These privates had to wait until on the verge of the grave to hear Webster's tribute at Bunker Hill.

Organization of Veterans Compels Heed to Views

And so it was after the Civil War, and after the War with Spain. It was not until after the organization of the veterans of the war of the States some years after Appomattox that men in the seats of the mighty began to give heed to their complaints or views. But that did not get them jobs or wages. Not many years after the Spanish War, there was a rule in the pension office at Washington that all pension papers of these "heroes" of 1898 should be "viewed with suspicion." Private soldiers had become suspicious characters.

One case I handled from the office of the late Senator Kern: A private with a meager pension, had contracted tuberculosis by exposure in the Philippines, and was in a desperate condition, unable to work. He applied for an increase in pension. Medical affidavits galore were showered on the Pension Bureau without effect. At length the soldier became so weak he could not lift his arm. Doctors, judges, ministers, bankers made affidavits to this effect, and the bureau replied that the evidence was "not sufficient" to show total disability. The mail that brought this reply brought a letter announcing the "hero's" death.

When Returning Soldiers Ceased to Be 'Heroes'

Recognizing the desperate strain on the finances of England of the dole, and the demoralizing effect on men of little character, there is human nature in sentiment behind it there. Hundreds of thousands of those who get the dole went up against the German guns in Flanders. The public cheered them on the Strand as they marched through London and called them "heroes," for whom nothing would be too good when they returned; and great numbers, crippled, disorganized for life, soon took their stations on the Strand with a tin cup in their hands. They were no longer heroes; and great gentlemen with 200,000 acres of unproductive estates drove by them without a glance.

The other day we were invited to shed a tear over the plight of an Englishman whose income of $250,000 a year has been cut to a meager $75,000 by taxes to maintain the dole; but the jobless man with a tin cup in his hand, who was gassed and wounded fighting for England, cannot be expected to shed a tear. The fact that the man whose income is thus reduced cannot put so much money into industry and thus create jobs makes no impression on a natural resentment. You can not talk the higher economics to a man with an empty stomach; you cannot reason with human misery. And that, of course, is the tragedy.

Not the Time to Press The Bonus Demand

So we are for these veterans of the World War here in everything reasonable they ask; but this is not the time to press the bonus demand. Every penny the nation now can spare must be mobilized against the starvation of the unemployed—for that is the higher patriotism. That is the emergency call; and the call of humanity. We have just learned authoritatively that in New York City alone there are at least 750,000 breadwinners out of work. If there are any crumbs from the rich man's table now it must go to these.

During the first five months of 1931 the courts issued 80,732 orders for the eviction of families from their homes — women and children; and 30,000 families were saved from the streets by the city. It is announced by the director of the Charity Organization Society that "the combined relief agencies of state, city and private enterprise cannot possibly meet the need arising from the unemployment emergencies this winter."

Then how is it to be met?

The President's appeal to the Legion would have been more effective if he had talked to the boys in terms of suffering humanity instead of treasury deficits. But that is not Mr. Hoover's way.

KNOWLEDGE OF HEAT

By Archibald Henderson

The name of Clausius is associated with the development of a true knowledge of the significance of heat, its properties and the laws which govern it. The fundamental questions concerning heat were subjects of uncertainty and debate down to the beginning of the nineteenth century. Although our savage ancestors knew that heat was generated and fire produced by rubbing two sticks together, it was many centuries before the scientists were able to give a correct explanation of heat, as the result of the friction of molecules with each other.

It seems incredible that the views of the Greek philosophers concerning heat and its cause survived for upwards of 2,000 years. They believed that heat effects were due to the addition of some material substance to the body experiencing a rise of temperature. At the very end of the seventeenth century a Professor Stahle, of the University of Halle in Germany, gave to this assumed substance the name "phlogiston." By many scientists this hypothetical substance was called "caloric." Many scientists, in the course of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries voiced their skepticism concerning this assumed substance—including Descartes, Boyle, Hooke and Newton. Although some of them conceived heat to be a "mode of motion," no one was able to furnish a convincing demonstration. Toward the end of the eighteenth century the famous American scientist, Count Rumford, put phlogiston out of business forever by proving that heat is due to the motion and friction of molecules of matter with each other.

Clausius gave a solid foundation to much that is known of heat today under the name of thermodynamics. Of recent years, this science and its principles have come to be recognized as of cardinal importance, especially in the field of astrophysics. Rudolph Julius Emmanuel Clausius was born in Koeslin, in Pomerania, on January 2, 1822. He was educated at the gymnasium in Stettin; and also studied at the University of Berlin from 1840 until 1844. Subsequently he took his degree at the University of Halle in 1848. In succession he was professor of physics at the Polytechnic Institute in Zurich (1855), in the University of Wuerzburg (1867), and in the University of Bonn (1869).

Two of the great discoveries of formulations of Clausius were those of the second law of thermodynamics and of the conception which he entitled entropy. The second law of thermodynamics means that heat cannot itself pass from colder to a hotter body. Heat energy of itself, in other words, always passes from high to low temperature. Entropy means that things, when mixed or shuffled, tend toward greater confusion, passing from simplicity towards complexity. Clausius applied his principles to a comprehensive development of the theory of the steam engine. Clerke Maxwell credits Clausius with being one of the founders of the kinetic theory of gases. Clausius died at Bonn on August 24, 1888.
